Quick Action On Steel Bids Predicted by Miss Perkins

Wage-Hr. Rulings Are Interpreted

Secretary Sees Break In Two Days; Labor Legislation Lags.

On the Labor Front.

A move to take off the tariff on steel in view of the Navy bid impasse was reported to the Secretary of Labor, but Miss Perkins expressed the belief that one or more bids would be submitted by steel companies for Navy work within 48 hours.

Organized railroad workers were united in their demands for an annual wage increase of approximately $360,000,000. Story on Page 2.

Sit-down strikes and other labor controversies in varying degrees of intensity were reported from virtually all parts of the country.

Tariff Removal Suggested.

By William V. Nessly.

Although Secretary of Labor Perkins has been advised of a move in Congress to remove the tariff on steel unless the industry supplies steel needed by the Navy for its new ships, the Secretary said late yesterday she expects bids from one or two companies within 48 hours.

Should the bids be forthcoming and prove satisfactory, a weeks-old impasse that has threatened serious delay in the Nation's naval construction program will have been broken.

Miss Perkins said at a press conference some steel concerns had understood that under the Walsh-Healey act they would be unable to operate more than 40 hours weekly while on Navy contracts. After advising them they could operate longer shifts than are provided in the act by paying time and one-half pay for overtime, she said she expected to receive bids.

Labor Program Lags.

Commenting on the steel concerns' stand that their heavy private orders made it inadvisable to bid on Navy orders, which usually call for the product in small lots, the Labor Secretary commented that the situation illustrated the "extraordinary favorable position of steel with its very high tariff." She then revealed she had been told of the move to lift the tariff from steel unless the Navy's needs are met. She declined to reveal the source of her information.

Meanwhile, it was indicated slow progress is being made on the Administration effort to draft a program of wage and hour legislation. President Roosevelt, asked at his press conference if he would soon have a message to Congress on the subject, declared the matter still is in the study stage, and will be for some time to come.

Secretary Perkins, an hour later, said she has a tentative bill in draft form as a basis for discussion between herself and legal officers of the Government and labor leaders.

Two Provisions Separate.

It is being changed daily, Miss Perkins said, as a result of conferences. The draft bill seeks to provide a flexible control of hours and wages, but contains no provisions for control or protection of business, as were provided in the fair trade practice clauses of the NRA codes. She declared that the two, control of hours and wages and regulation of trade practices, were found under NRA to be "quite separate," and having no essential relationship to each other.

Asked if the legislation would undertake to control the service trades, Miss Perkins emphasized that it was based on "flexibility" and with principles that need not apply to every industry similarly under all circumstances. She said it would be very expensive to have separate machinery for every industry, such as is provided in the revised Guffey-Vinson bill to regulate the bituminous coal industry, and she would undertake to provide common administrative machinery with specific leeway in dealing with individual industries.

Confers With Roosevelt.

Just what part Miss Perkins' bill eventually will play in the President's program, to be submitted to Congress, is not yet clear. It is known, however, that she has conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on the subject and has kept him in touch with developments at the successive conferences.

The Secretary of Labor revealed also that she is altering her request

Lawyers Gain Partial Victory For Townsend

With his overcoat wrapped around his lanky legs like a buggy robe, Dr. Francis E. Townsend sat complacently in District Supreme Court yesterday while his attorneys scored a partial victory without presenting a single witness in his defense against charges of contempt of a House Investigating Committee.

Justice Peyton Gordon before recessing court until today told Defense Attorneys Elisha Hanson and Joseph A. Cantrell that he was prepared to direct a not guilty verdict on the second count in the indictment against the elderly physician.

"I have not made up my mind finally at this moment concerning your motion to dismiss the first count of the indictment, too," said Justice Gordon, "but at this moment I am inclined to think I shall decide against you. However, I will think it over tonight and will announce my ruling in the morning."

First Count Is "Walk-Out."

The first count of the indictment alleges Dr. Townsend came into contempt of the Bell committee investigating old-age pension plans through his dramatic "walk-out" on the committee last May.

The second count bases its contempt citation on the allegation that he refused to testify before the committee.

At the beginning of the trial, Hanson pointed out, District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett announced that the Government, through stipulation, admitted that "when Dr. Townsend left the committee room no question was pending and he had never refused to answer any question put to him."

The Government's star witness was John B. Kiefer, of Los Angeles, a former director of the Old-Age Revolving Pension Syndicate, who testified plans were made for Dr. Townsend's "walk-out" two weeks before he even was subpenaed to appear before the committee.

Decision Was Planned.

The decision was reached at a meeting of the directors in Baltimore last April and Dr. Townsend agreed to the plan, Kiefer said.

"It was considered a masterpiece of strategy," volunteered Kiefer.

Dr. Townsend, who appeared for his trial wearing a brown suit, brown spats, brown shoes and a red and white striped necktie, stared owlishly at Kiefer through horn-rimmed glasses while his former aide was on the stand. At times he rubbed his lips with his forefinger and twice whispered to Hanson, who was fighting desperately to have Kiefer's testimony stricken from the record.

Kiefer was indicted for contempt with Dr. Townsend. He pleaded

Soda and 'God Bless You' Trap Blonde Gun Girl in Holdup

A blonde gun girl last night held up a grocery store in the 1900 block of Eighteenth street northwest, took $25 from the cash register, and was captured by police when she lingered to drink a bottle of soda for her nerves and cry at the thought of what she had done.

At the Third Precinct Station the prisoner, 29 years old and pretty, said her name was Annie Lucille Schakls. She gave no address.

Miss Schackls entered the store of Samuel Schwartz while the owner was attending a meeting of the District Grocery Stores, Inc., to which he belongs. His 15-year-old son, Andrew, was in charge, and there were two customers inside, a man and a woman.

"I want half a pint of liquor," she said.

Andrew, who is a minor, called his mother, Mrs. Rose Schwartz. When Mrs. Schwartz handed the bottle to the girl, she whipped out a .32-caliber pistol.

"Put them up!" she said, unsteadily. "Give me all the money—all of it, see—that is in the cash register."

Mrs. Schwartz handed the girl $25, all the cash register contained. Dissatisfied, the girl inspected the register herself. As she came back on the other side, the customers stood with their hands above their heads.

"God bless you, my dear," said one of the customers, and the gun girl began to weep. She asked for a soft drink, and as she was drinking it the police came.

"I don't know why I did this. Maybe it's just because my mother was sick," said the gun girl.

Edith Maxwell's Lawyer to Ask For Third Trial

Alexandrian Will Cite Doctors' Testimony, Court's Errors.

Charles Henry Smith, Alexandria attorney, said yesterday he would leave over the week-end for Wise, Va., where on Monday he will ask that the verdict in Edith Maxwell's second trial be set aside and a new trial be granted.

Miss Maxwell, a 22-year-old mountain school teacher, charged with killing Trigg Maxwell, her father, was found guilty of second degree murder last December and sentenced to 20 years in jail.

Attorney Smith, in asking that this verdict be set aside, will base his arguments on these grounds: Errors in admitting evidence, errors in selecting the jury, refusal to grant Edith's appeal for a change of venue, and lack of evidence to justify a second-degree murder verdict.

On the score of lack of evidence, Attorney Smith is expected to emphasize the testimony of four physicians, who insisted that Trigg Maxwell could not have died from the blow he received on the head.

Edith is now free on 15,000 bond. If Judge Ezra Carter refuses to set the 20-year verdict aside and grant a new trial, he may remand her to jail. On the other hand, he may allow her to remain free on bond while Smith carries the case to the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals.

Loyal Miners Blast Path to Oviedo Citadel

Loyalist Artillery Crushes Rebel Defenses in Three Places.

By the Associated Press.

Bilbao, Spain, Feb. 23.—Dynamite-hurling Asturian miners, backed by a government artillery barrage that crumpled insurgent defenses, charged toward the smoke-blanketed center of Oviedo today, driving before them desperate insurgent defenders of the "Alcazar of the Asturias."

Reports from Gijon, Biscayan seaport 20 miles from the besieged city, said the "dinamiteros" took the offensive after government artillery shattered insurgent defenses at the Oviedo Stadium, an arms factory, and the College of Santo Dominique.

Insurgent batteries, installed on the flanks of Mount Naranco, shelled the government positions between the Mercadin sector and a reservoir, Gijon reports said.

Armored trains and tanks, supplementing militiamen and miners, slowly were driving the defense forces toward the center of the city, employing hand grenades as well as the miners' dynamite bombs. A counterattack was attempted by the insurgents in the Colloto Lugomes sector, but was repulsed.

Sit-Down Strikers Halt Six Detroit Plants, Plane Factory; Collier's Pressmen Stop Work

By the United Press.

Detroit, Feb. 23.—Sit-down strikes in a variety of industries, large and small, spread over Detroit tonight while General Motors and union conferees labored over final settlement of their automobile strike.

The largest of eight sit-downs called during the day—at the Briggs Manufacturing Co., makers of automobile bodies—was settled shortly after it began and the 1,500 strikers returned to work.

Four hundred sit-downers who struck this morning at the Detrola Radio and Television Corporation plant were granted wage increases of from 15 to 25 per cent after a 6-hour conference with the management.

Strikes still in progress:

Woodall Manufacturing Co., auto parts factory.

Arvey Corporation of America, auto parts factory.

Yale & Towne Lock Co., automotive division.

H. & H. Tube & Manufacturing Co., makers of automobile radiator tubes.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 23.—The big Douglas aircraft plant at Santa Monica closed down production operations today after about 500 of its 5,600 employes launched a sit-down strike with a demonstration like that of college football fans between halves of a game.

Douglas executives ordered "loyal" employes, including women office workers, to stop work and go home shortly before noon.

The demonstration started when someone pulled the main power switch, stopping machinery. Several hundred cheering men began to march about the plant, urging other workers to join in a strike for more pay.

Strike leaders said the sit-down had been ordered by the aircraft division of the United Automobile Workers of America, C. I. O. affiliate.

Italians Kill 600 Natives In Ethiopia

300 Shot Down in Prison Camp; Another 300 by Raiders.

Revenge for Bombing of Army Heads Ordered From Rome.

By the United Press.

Rome, Feb. 23.—Fascist firing squads, with rifles that seldom became cold, mowed down more than 600 Ethiopians in Italy's bloody reprisal for injuries to two of its high officials at Addis Ababa last Friday, a summary of mass executions indicated tonight.

After black-shirted executioners for Il Duce, acting under direct orders from Rome, wreaked the first installment of Italy's vengence on 300 terrified natives, huddled in a prison camp at the Ethiopian capital, squads of Italian troops roved through the city "cleaning up suspicious quarters." About 200 were shot down.

An additional 100 natives were mowed down at the time of the bombing, when officers and soldiers fired point blank into crowds packed around the public square.

"Suspects" Executed.

The government communique which told of the execution of the first lot of "suspects," failed to say whether the actual bomb throwers had been discovered. It was presumed they had not.

Seven hundred have been released, having "proved their innocence" of charges against them, but 1,000 still are being held while Italian officials, acting on instructions from Rome, carefully weigh their doom.

The specific charge of the mass executions was being "an enemy of Italy" or possessing firearms.

Firearms Forbidden.

Immediately after the bombing episode, in which explosives were hurled into a celebration on the public square at Addis Ababa, injuring Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, viceroy of Ethiopia, and Gen. Aurelio Liotta, a decree was promulgated against possession of firearms by the conquered Ethiopians.

The decree, emanating from Il Duce, made possession of guns by any Ethiopian punishable by death.

The roundup of Ethiopians followed. The 2,000 natives, hauled before a summary inquiry board, were suspected of having taken part in the assault or of having guns.

Slap at Italy.

Rome, Feb. 23 (U.P.).—Reports from London that Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia had accepted an invitation to send a representative to King George's coronation in May created consternation here tonight. One official predicted that Italy might boycott the pageant.

The British invitation to powerless Haile Selassie was regarded here as a diplomatic slap at Italy and at King Victor Emanuel III, who already has adopted the title "Emperor of Ethiopia."

Dry League Fires Tennessee Parson For Liquor Spree

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 23 (U.P.).—The Tennessee Antisaloon League, guardian of public morals here for 28 years, fired its elderly field secretary tonight on a charge he staged a two-fisted drinking spree on downtown streets of Union City, Tenn.

The Rev. W. G. Gaston, bailed out of the Union City Jail for $10, was discharged on the eve of a finish fight to save Tennessee's 28-year-old dry laws.

Bitter charges of "frame-up" and "hypocrisy" were hurled as the league immediately was embroiled in the hottest controversy in years.

Repeal leaders capitalized on dissension in dry ranks to file a bill in the Tennessee Legislature calling for prohibition repeal and establishment of a local option package-store system.

Union City's night marshal, D. P. Phillips, said:

"Gaston couldn't have walked on a 3-foot sidewalk. He was staggering all over the street. I saw him drink six bottles of beer in two or three restaurants."

Seine River Perils Environs of Paris; Floods Hit France

Paris, Feb. 23 (AP).—The steady rise of the Seine River menaced the environs of Paris tonight as danger of the winter's second flood siege grew acute elsewhere in the nation.

A let-up in the rain caused experts to expect the crest of the Seine one day later, on February 26. The river, already about 12 feet above normal, had inundated lowlands in the suburb of the capital and was threatening the grounds of the 1937 International Exposition. The Meuse River was out of its banks along several stretches between Verdun and Vaucouleurs in western France.

Reports said a vessel with 22 passengers was missing and another was known to have foundered with the loss of three lives in a heavy storm off the East Tunisian coast.

Mercy Death Bill Loses.

Lincoln, Nebr., Feb. 23 (AP).—A Nebraska legislative committee killed a bill to legalize mercy deaths today by a 6-0 vote. The only physician in the Senate, Dr. A. L. Miller, of Kimball, moved the bill be killed.

G. O. P. Senators Begin Battle To Block Trade Pact Renewal

Harrison Backs Measure; Cites Landon Talk on Babassu Oil.

By Sidney Olson.

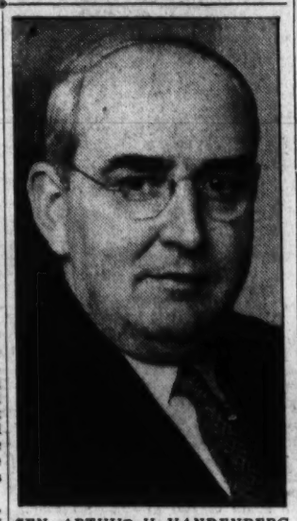
Thrusting aside sarcastic references to "babassu nut propaganda," Republican leaders in the Senate yesterday laid down a two-hour oratorical barrage against extension of the reciprocal trade agreements act unless materially amended.

During a speech beginning the Senate's debate on extension of the act, Senator Pat Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, vividly recalled to the Senators the much-criticized speech of Gov. Alf M. Landon at Minneapolis during the political campaign of last year, when the Kansas nominee pointed to the "menace" of babassu-nut oil imports from Brazil.

On the House side of the Capitol, a permanent neutrality act, granting the President considerably wider powers of discretion than outlined in the Senate Pittman bill, was agreed on informally by the Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday. Final agreement for a favorable report to the floor will be reached today shortly after 11 a. m., it was indicated.

During the trade agreements debate, Harrison, smiling in broad enjoyment, shouted:

"Who would have supposed until the autumn of last year that the fate of the national election—no, of the



SEN. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG.

Nation itself—would hinge upon this poor little unassuming nut?"

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, responded later with the observation that "I know as little about babassu-nut oil as the Senator from Mississippi does, which is a complete state of ignorance. But the State Department has made it impossible to tax this oil from Brazil, which presents

Maryland Democrat Calls Plan 'Improper;' 33 Senators Opposed.

Leaders in House, Roosevelt Confer

McCarran Expected to Call Up Retirement Measure Today.

By Robert C. Albright.

Senate opposition to the President's judiciary program yesterday gained another recruit and a slight edge over publicly committed court plan proponents, as Senator Millard F. Tydings, Maryland Democrat, called for a constitutional amendment on legislative powers.

"I do not feel that the proposed enlargement of the Supreme Court is proper," said Tydings. "In reality, such enlargement settles nothing permanently."

The Maylander's statement brought the known list of Senate opponents to 33, a 3-vote lead over the 30 Senators who have supported publicly the President's plan.

53 May Favor Plan.

But privately Administration leaders are claiming from 50 to 53 votes on the ultimate showdown. Informal opposition claims 40 "positive" votes and a "possible" eight more. That would be insufficient to defeat the bill, except by prolonged filibuster.

Tydings broke his long reticence as House leaders on leaving a White House conference called for the Senate to act first on the court measure, and as Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, planned to call up in the Senate today or tomorrow a House bill for the full pay voluntary retirement of Supreme Court Justices at 70.

Asks Amendment.

"Since the proposal was submitted to Congress to enlarge the Supreme Court by the appointment of six new justices thereto, I have given to the subject my most careful and thoughtful consideration," Tydings said in a short prepared statement.

"If wider legislative powers are desired for Congress then the orderly way to secure such wider powers for the Congress is through the method of Constitutional amendment, where the people may grant or withhold the powers requested."

Labor Drive Extended.

He was the third Senator in three days to break from the Senate's "non-committal list to oppose the plan, in the face of an extensive campaign to elicit labor and farm support for the plan. The drive for worker backing was extended yesterday by labor's Non-partisan League, which set March 8, the day before Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on the program, for a "convention" as a climax to its campaign. Expected farm support was not developing. The National Grange has opposed the plan and Farm Bureau Federation spokesmen have reserved their views.

Another Senate commitment against the plan is expected tonight when Senator Rush Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, broadcasts his views in a radio address. Opponents of the plan were expecting Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, to break his silence in the next week.

Vote Seen Delayed.

Although the Senate Judiciary Committee will open court hearings in a fortnight, leaders think it will be 60 to 90 days before the issue can possibly reach a Senate vote, and the House leadership was frankly admitting "we may be here until cold weather comes again."

"I don't see any hope of an early

'Honor' Caused Slayings, Says Hunter Counsel

John Francis Hunter acted on the impulse to defend the "honor" of his wife and children and under the strain of his emotions went temporarily insane, his counsel told a jury trying the former railroad brakeman in Arlington County courthouse yesterday for the murder of his wife, Mrs. Anne Delmas Hunter.

Mrs. Hunter and Henry E. Corcoran were shot to death at the Hunter home on South Seventeenth street in Virginia Highlands on the afternoon of May 7, 1934.

Subsequently Hunter was sent to the State hospital at Marion, Va., where he was confined more than two years before he was returned to the scene of the alleged murders to face trial after physicians adjudged him sane.

At the opening of his trial yesterday, Hunter entered a plea of not guilty to the murder of his wife. He also has been indicted for the murder of Corcoran.

Hunter, 40 years old, sat in the crowded courtroom with his mother, Mrs. Rose A. Hunter, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Dalton. His father, Henry H. Hunter, would have been at his side also, he told reporters, but for the fact that he is seriously ill in Naval Hospital in Washington.

Hunter, his face still lividly scarred by the gunshot wound police charged he inflicted on himself in an attempt at suicide, was surrounded by a battery of legal talent headed by M. J. Fulton, of Richmond.

Fulton's first move was to file a motion for dismissal of the murder charge, but Judge Walter T. McCarthy overruled him. He based his plea, in part, on a contention that Hunter's confinement in the State hospital had been unlawful, that the judge who sent him there had done so without seeking medical advice.

Fulton charged that psychiatrists at the hospital had been unable at any time to find Hunter insane.

"If counsel for the accused had not taken this case up," he told

Eighth Torso Found in Lake At Cleveland

Police Press Hunt for Maniac as Woman Is Murdered.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 23.—The discovery of a woman torso-slaying victim—Cleveland's eighth since September, 1934—sent police tonight in search of a sex-mad, surgically skilled maniac they believed responsible.

A fireman came upon the torso, cleverly severed from the arms, head and legs, on the shore of Lake Erie, in Cleveland's East Side.

At almost the some spot one previous victim was found. Five other mutilated bodies were left in the desolate Kingsbury Run section, a few miles away.

The body found today, Police Lieut. William Sargent said, apparently had not been in the water more than a day or two.

The dissection had been cleanly made, he pointed out in support of the police theory that the same person was responsible for all the eight slayings that have shocked Cleveland's 1,000,000 residents.

The city's police department—headed by Eliot Ness, former Government alcohol tax unit agent, who helped send Al Capone to prison—swung afresh into a hunt that has not been relaxed since the headless body of the first victim in the series of slayings was found in the same vicinity—near East 156th street—2½ years ago. Hundreds of suspects have been questioned.

Robert Smith, 55, who had gone to the shore to gather driftwood, found the body.

Following the discovery of the last torso in the Kingsbury Run district, Dr. A. J. Pearse, former coroner, called a meeting of police officials, crime experts, psychiatrists and chemists in an attempt to reach some agreement on the sort of killer the police department was seeking.

After nearly three hours of debate and conjecture, Detective Sergt. James Hogan, chief of the homicide squad, said:

"We're right where we were the day the first body was found."

Farnsworth Demands Death Or Liberty on Treason Charge

Former Lieut. Comdr. John E. Farnsworth, cashiered Navy officer, charged with selling American naval secrets to Japan, last night pleaded for a trial so that a jury may decide whether he is a monster or a "sap."

The erstwhile flier, who says he was drinking a quart of whisky a day when he was arrested, summoned a reporter of The Post to his cell in the District Jail and, after an hour-long talk, exclaimed:

"If I be guilty of treason to my country, let me be lined up before a firing squad and shot.

"If I be innocent, give me my freedom.

"There is only one way to decide whether I am a monster or a sap, and that's to try the case and let a jury pass on it. After what happened today, I am convinced the Government is afraid to try me."

Earlier in the day, Justice James M. Proctor in District Court refused to allow Farnsworth to withdraw his plea of "nolo contendere," which means "I do not contest the Government's charges."

Farnsworth told the court that he made such a plea under pressure, and against his own best judgment. He said he was told that by so pleading his family would be spared the publicity of a trial. But, he added last night, the prosecution stirred up publicity anyway, and he decided to change his plea.

Judge Proctor, after hearing Farnsworth's attorneys deny charges of pressure, refused to allow the

G. M. Officials 'More Vicious,' Senate Is Told

'Framing' of Union Workers Charged by U. A. W. Organizer.

By the Associated Press.

A witness told the Senate Civil Liberties Committee yesterday that officials of the Chevrolet Plant, No. 4, at Flint, Mich., scene of a recent "sit-down" strike, had become "more vicious" in their attitude toward labor unions since the strike settlement.

Robert C. Travis, of Flint, organizer for the United Automobile Workers which called the strike, testified that since the strike union men were "being framed."

Travis also told the committee the General Motors Chevrolet division at Flint manufactured 2,000 blackjacks for use by plant patrol guards.

The committee heard testimony from three union organizers employed in the Fisher Body plant in Baltimore that hostile nonunion men prevented them from going to work this morning.

Glenn Rowland, Charles E. Whittaker and James Scheibe said that when they reported a group of fellow workers left the assembly line and refused to work with them.

Cyril Malpas, plant superintendent, asserted that as he escorted Rowland back to his job there was considerable "hub-bub" among the men. He estimated they were 90 per cent hostile to Rowland.

Some Are Friendly.

Rowland testified a number of his fellow workers spoke to him in a friendly manner, gripped his hand and said they would be glad to work with him.

The three were told by Allen D. Byers, Fisher Body plant manager, to go home and come back tomorrow. Byers testified he believed he could "work out" the situation so all could get their jobs back. The workmen testified they were promised their full pay for today.

Under questioning by La Follette, Travis said he believed company spies circulated among the "sit-down" strikers at Flint.

"Vicious" Stories Cited.

As evidence, he cited what he called "vicious anti-union" stories written for the New York Times by Russell Porter, a reporter who had been denied admittance to the plant when sit-down strikers held it.

Travis said that a "probably substantiating reason why there are anti-union stories in the New York Times" is the fact that Mike Gorman, editor of the Flint Journal, is the Times' correspondent when Porter is not there. He described the Journal as a "General Motors paper."

Nitrate Firm Denies Deal With Spain

Hopewell, Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—Officials of the Solvay Process Co. here reiterated today they had no knowledge of a shipment of nitrates for Spain which has led the crew of the British freighter Linaria to appeal to President Roosevelt for intervention.

Members of the crew, aboard the vessel in Boston Harbor, said "for blood money and bribe" they were to take a load of nitrate of soda aboard from the Solvay plant here to be delivered to the Fascist forces at Seville.

Their petition to the President asked him to help them to follow neutrality laws of nonintervention.

The State Department, however, announced at the Capital that there is nothing in the law that prohibits a shipment of nitrate of soda, which is used in the manufacture of fertilizer and explosives.

Waits for Orders.

Boston, Feb. 23 (AP).—The British freighter Linaria, whose crew protested to American and English authorities against transporting nitrates to Fascist forces in Spain, lay idly at anchor here tonight as further instructions were awaited from the British board of trade.

Indiana Senate Passes Measure to Oust Wirt

Indianapolis, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Indiana State Senate today passed a bill, after bitter debate, which Senator Harvey J. Post, of Hammond, one of its supporters, said probably would result in the ousting of Dr. William A. Wirt as superintendent of schools at Gary.

It was Dr. Wirt who, in 1934, testified before a Congressional committee that he had heard talk at a Washington party which caused him to believe President Roosevelt was a "Kerensky."

'Quints' Word Ban Asked.

New Faces in Congress

Rep. Leavy, Gazing in Crystal, Sees End of Western Wastes

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES H. LEAVY.

Congressman From Washington Envisions Millions of Happy Americans Dwelling in Electrical Bliss.

By Liam Lenihan.

Florid-faced, judicial - looking Charles H. Leavy has little in common with the soothsayers. But he did some crystal gazing yesterday. And what he saw was his dream realized and an electric paradise in the Northwest.

"The sagebrush is going," said the Congressman from Spokane." Deserted farms have been turned into welcome shacks for workmen and tents dot the landscape. The Columbia River Basin is a beehive of activity. When the Coulee Dam is completed it will be three times as large as the largest of the Great Pyramids. Some day 2,000,000 people will live contented in that area."

Dreams of Northwest.

Representative Leavy just cannot keep his mind off the Northwest. He rambled on about it yesterday with a far-away look. He envisions the immensity of the project that is going to affect not only the Columbia River Bason but all Mountain States and the Pacific Coast territory. And he believes, and says so with earnestness, that electric power will one day be made so cheap there that it will become a standard article of use, not only for agriculture and industry but also for every home within reach of an electric-light line.

Section hand, harvest worker, teacher, Leavy was born on a farm near York, Pa. Since the West promised more, his parents moved to Missouri when he was 3 and he received his education in the common schools of that State.

"I had early ambitions to be a lawyer," he reminisced yesterday. "But my parents were not well off—you see, I was one of 13. So I went to normal school, passed the State exam for teachers, but was unable to find employment due to my youthful appearance."

Wanted to "Toughen Up."

Young Leavy did some heavy thinking then. He was too immature for the professions but not too young to get a job. So he became a section hand "to toughen up" and quit after a month when the grind became too hard and the physical metamorphosis was complete. "It was the toughest job I've had," he said with a laugh. "But it must have worked wonders because I was soon teaching school."

But the youthful teacher never lost sight of his early goal. He studied law at night. When, three years later, he went to Washington State to teach in public schools for six years, he still burned the midnight oil until he was finally admitted to practice.

That was in 1912. Two years later he was elected prosecuting attorney of Pend Oreille County, was re-elected in 1916 and served until 1918. In that year President Wilson appointed him as Special Assistant United States Attorney and for three years he was cleaning up scores of war statute violations.

Made Prosecutor.

In 1922, Leavy was elected prosecuting attorney of Spokane County. It was a Republican bailiwick but he succeeded in breaking the spell that had thwarted Democrats for 14 years. Four years later he led a field of seven candidates to become judge of the superior court, was twice re-elected without opposition and served until last fall. In the November Congressional race he trounced his opponent, even topping President Roosevelt by more than 5,000 votes.

Congressman Leavy's primary interest is to see the Coulee project proceed to completion. He will work, too, for any development program for the unplumbed natural resources of his district. Nationally, he will back the New Deal "in its broader meaning" and specifically any move for "the better distribution of the national income on a broader basis." And he is an ardent advocate of a Federal old-age pension system to supplant the 48-States pension laws which he fears will become "political footballs."

G.O.P. Senators Fight Renewal Of Trade Pact

a new competitive danger to our home markets."

After thus briefly cleaning up the only purely political angle of the debate, the Michigan Senator settled into his forensic stride, hacking vigorously at the proposed extension with full-arm gestures and belligerent shouts, in an address of more than an hour's time, during which he repeatedly pleaded with the Senate to "listen to me."

Few Hear Address.

But a mere handful of Democrats, three of whom read newspapers through much of the address, and a half-dozen Republicans, sat somnolently through the Vandenberg assault, in which he rehearsed the entire list of arguments against the reciprocal trade agreements. He said:

"I cannot surrender the deep conviction that regardless of incidental and spotted commercial benefits here and there, this particular kind of reciprocity is unfortunate, ill advised, unwarranted and in direct violation of the Constitution of the United States.

"I stand for reciprocity which does not leave American producers wholly at the final mercy of secret bureaucratic negotiations.

"I give my layman's conception that this system is an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to the executive beyond any peradventure whatsoever.

No Definite Formula.

"While it limits tariff changes to 50 per cent, it does not assert a definite formula like the cost-of-production formula in the elastic tariff law to guide the executive. * * * The absence of a definite formula is a fatal defect. * * *

"I am unable to believe that the Senate will be willing to extend some of these amazing usurpations of power by the State Department, and I think it can be clearly demonstrated that they are such; and I challenge any proof to the contrary."

Vandenberg, who has offered a series of amendments which would modify the program substantially, was supported by Senators William E. Borah, Idaho, and Arthur Capper, Kansas, in his lengthy onslaught. The Idahoan rose to remonstrate with Senator J. Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, when the latter was asserting that reciprocal trade agreements need not be ratified by the Senate. Borah contended sharply that the agreements were in fact treaties and that, constitutionally, all treaties must be ratified by the Senate.

Quotes Export Figures.

Senator Harrison's defense of the trade program followed the lines of the Finance Committee's report on the bill, and specifically pointed to the "gratifying increase" in American exports to trade-agreement countries over that with nonagreement countries as proof of his assertion that the present act is "entirely sound" and as "the best all-round way to build up trade."

The House neutrality act, in general along the lines of the Senate measure, differs clearly in the sections on export of materials in wartime, offering the President wide discretionary powers such as were banned by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee members. The Senate bill, providing cash-and-carry neutrality, was discretionary as to carry and mandatory as to cash, while the House bill is discretionary in both instances, thus coming nearer the desires of the State Department.

A vote and probable passage of the trade agreement extension will likely be reached today, according to Democratic leaders in the Senate. The permanent neutrality law will then be the order of business. The House may begin the neutrality discussion today.

Death of Taxi Driver Is Pronounced Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald in the death of Robert F. Fuller, 26-year-old cab driver, of 1418 Taylor street northwest.

Leaving a note to his wife, saying good-by and professing his love for her, Fuller shot himself in the head with a .32-caliber revolver. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, where he died a short time later.

Rail Unions Ask $360,000,000 Wage Increase

1,100,000 Workers Unite to Demand 20 Per Cent Boost in Pay.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—The Nation's 1,100,000 organized railroad workers were united tonight in demanding an annual wage increase of approximately $360,000,000.

Spokesmen for the 800,000 members of the 16 "nonoperating" railway brotherhoods voted today to seek a 20 per cent hike in their pay.

Representatives of the 300,000 men in the five "operating" brotherhoods recently initiated a move to obtain a raise of the same size.

Estimating about $360,000,000 in yearly income would be at stake when negotiators for the brotherhoods and for the management of the carriers sit down to a parley on the demands, George M. Harrison, chairman of the current meeting, declared:

"These are the largest negotiations ever undertaken by organized railroad workers."

The delegates planned to serve formal notice on the railroads within 30 days. They drew up this list of demands:

1. A general wage increase of 20 cents an hour, applied to hourly, daily, weekly, monthly or piece rates, so as to produce the same rate of increase for all employes. Harrison said this amounted to an average raise of approximately 20 per cent.

2. A guarantee of full-time employment for all regularly assigned employes.

3. A guarantee of two-thirds of full-time employment for all "stand-by" employes.

Revenue Rise Cited.

Contending the rail lines were enjoying increasing freight and passenger revenues, Harrison stated:

"Railroad wages never have been adequate. In this industry now there are 330,000 men working for 50 cents an hour or less and 117,000 working for 35 or less."

The workers took reductions totaling 10 per cent during the depression but these were made up by 1935.

Presidents of the various brotherhoods will speak for the workers in negotiating with the railroad executives. Harrison said the 16 "nonoperating" and five "operating" brotherhoods probably would bargain separately but "if we can develop a joint conference, we will do so."

to Congress that her department be granted the right of subpena in investgating labor disputes. She said yesterday that she was following a new approach to the problem. She would have the subpena power granted for use only when a labor dispute lasts a considerable time, the period to be designated in the legislation, and when it has interfered with interstate commerce. Her previous request, which has not been acted on, would have made the power available in advance of a strike, in order to bring to light hidden facts that were contributing to duration of the dispute.

Another labor development yesterday was issuance by the Department of Justice of instructions to Federal attorneys in five coast cities to defend the Copeland act requiring sailors to carry continuous discharge books issued by the Government and containing a record of each seaman's service.

The seamen are opposing the requirements and have taken legal action in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Portland, Oreg.; New York, Seattle, Jacksonville, Fla., and Galveston, Tex. Federal attorneys in the last two cities will receive instructions "later," Stanley Reed, acting Attorney General, said.

Secret Hearing Set For Slayer of Girl

Coatesville, Pa., Feb. 23 (AP).—A secret hearing for Alexander Meyer, who a corner's jury found had "deliberately murdered" Helen Moyer, 16, was arranged today by District Attorney A. Raymond Reid.

Because of feeling against the husky, 20-year-old farmer, Reid declined to make public the plans for the hearing, or the time it will be held.

125,000 U. S. Workers Held Jobs Here in 1936

The number of Government employes in Washington has increased from 72,000 in 1930 to 125,00 in 1936, C. E. Lamson, director of the D. C. Employment Center, said last night in a talk in connection with the occupational guidance program of the Y. M. C. A.

Lamson told of the occupations available in the District and submitted charts showing the number of persons engaged in the different fields. A. H. Arenson, personnel director of the Social Securtiy Board, discussed information that should be obtained concerning prospective jobs.

Pension Plan Founder Goes on Trial

guilty and was given a suspended sentence several days ago. Before he left the stand, Kiefer revealed that he has filed suit against Dr. Townsend alleging libel and slander. "They are negotiating to settle that suit out of court," said Kiefer staring defiantly at Dr. Townsend.

At the Baltimore meeting, Kiefer said, it was agreed at an informal conference that "at the proper time for the psychological effect as well as for the publicity, Dr. Townsend would walk out on the committee."

Efforts Halted.

Efforts by Hanson to link political guile with the investigation of Dr. Townsend's pension plan were sharply curtailed by Justice Gordon.

When Representative C. Jasper Bell, chairman of the House Old-Age Pension Investigating Committee, took the witness stand Hanson asked him if his election was involved in fraud cases pending in Kansas City. Bell said it was not. Justice Gordon asked what Hanson intended to prove, and the attorney replied:

"We are prepared to show that this investigation was undertaken for purely political purposes. We propose to show that Representative Bell comes from Kansas City where there is a notoriously corrupt political organization that is opposed to the Townsend plan."

Justice Gordon ruled such questioning was not in order and when Hanson a few minutes later began asking Bell what questions were fired at Dr. Townsend during the time he was in the committee's witness chair he declared sharply:

"If you want to proceed with this line of questioning I'll excuse the jury and we can have a dress rehearsal. Then I'll make my rulings without getting before the jury statements I do not think are proper.

"You understood my earlier ruling and if you have any further questions along that line you can come to the bench and I'll rule."

Undaunted, Hanson noted exceptions to Justice Gordon's rulings.

Garnett read into the record several pages of the record made by the House Investigating Committee before and after Dr. Townsend walked out. Defense counsel said they did not contest the fact that Dr. Townsend had walked out on the committee.

"No question was pending at the time he left and no effort was made to restrain him," said Hanson. "The committee didn't even ask him if he meant what he said."

After Kiefer testified, Garnett announced the Government rested its case. The jury was excused and Hanson made his motion for a directed verdict. This was vigorously opposed by Garnett and Assistant District Attorney Charles Murray.

"Runs Like a Turkey."

"Can Congress be powerless to punish a witness who sticks his head in the door and then runs like a turkey merely because no specific question was pending at the time?"

Justice Gordon recalled that when Harry Sinclair was sent to jail for contempt of the Senate, the Court of Appeals had held that he was compelled to answer only questions which were pertinent to the subject under investigation. As District Attorney at the time, Justice Gordon prosecuted Sinclair.

Dr. Townsend seemed more worried about draughts in the courtroom than he did about the outcome of the trial. Throughout the day he kept his blue overcoat wrapped around his knees and ankles.

Government and defense counsel agreed in 20 minutes on a jury comprising 11 men and 1 woman.

Before the trial got under way one of Dr. Townsend's aides told newspapermen that the first effort to organize Townsend Clubs in the Nation's Capital would be made tonight at a mass meeting at Pythian Hall. Dr. Townsend will be master of ceremonies, it was announced and five Congressmen will speak. They are Representatives Joseph Hendricks, of Florida; Jerry J. O'Connell, of Montana, James Oliver, of Missouri; Harry Sheppard, of California, and Dewey Johnson, of Minnesota.

Hutton Broker Charged With 'Rigging' Stock

Detroit Man Used Customer's Cash to Affect Prices, Says Attorney.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission charged yesterday W. E. Hutton & Co., New York brokers, "had an understanding" with customers by which their accounts were used to create a false market for common stock of the Atlas Tack Corporation.

Jacob Gruber, Government counsel in the suit to bar the firm from the securities markets, made the charge on the basis of evidence given by Albert F. Reilly, Detroit manufacturers' agent.

The witness testified that in November, 1935, he paid a premium of $3,000 above the list price for 2,000 Atlas shares and that during December Hutton operatives in Detroit frequently traded in his account.

"You had an understanding with Jerry McCarthy (Detroit customers' man for Hutton) that he could use your account to keep the market (for Atlas) from slipping, didn't you?" Gruber demanded.

Reilly replied that McCarthy often bought and sold for him on the same day, but denied knowledge that the transactions were for the purpose of creating activity in Atlas stock.

David W. Peck, Hutton counsel, appealed to Edward C. Johnson, trial examiner, to instruct Gruber not to put personal "speeches" and leading questions into the record.

"Government counsel has violated all the rules of evidence," Peck declared.

N. Y. Labor Fights Blamed for Killing

Hackensack, N. J., Feb. (AP).—New clews uncovered in the search for the slayers of R. Norman Redwood, "Sandhogs" union leader, all "led into New York's labor troubles," Bergen County Prosecutor John J. Breslin, jr., said tonight.

At the West Twentieth Street Police Station four men were questioned about a statement, Breslin said, was made by "two of the State's main witnesses."

On February 13, Breslin said, these witnesses were conversing with Samuel Rosoff, millionaire subway builder, when Rosoff pointed to four men in a car nearby and said:

"If you men don't be nice, these men are the ones who will take care of you."

Truce Called.

Toledo, Feb. 23 (AP).—Six hundred occupants of the 17-story Nicholas Building used stairways to reach their offices today when building service employes struck.

A truce was made a short time after the strike was called, but the employes announced through their spokesman, Edward Markey, that unless the management signed a contract calling for increased wages and shorter hours, the men would walk out again.

Monaghan Pal Tells of Threat, Drinking Party

Hotelman in Vicious Mood Night of His Death, Friend Testifies.

By the Associated Press.

Somerset, Pa., Feb. 23.—Frank C. Monaghan's "best friend" testified today in defense of the State trooper who is charged with beating him to death in a "third degree."

Alex Freirisch, a Uniontown newspaperman, testified before Attorney John Duggan, jr., rested his defense of Trooper Stacy Gunderman:

"I was Monaghan's best friend. He made a very vicious threat against a certain party and said, 'the law better not cross my path before morning.'"

That was on the night of last September 11, Freirisch said, before Detective John C. Wall was cut in the 64-year-old hotel man's automobile.

Threat Is Cited.

Monaghan and Florence Dean, his 19-year-old chambermaid, were at his home, Freirisch testified, adding: "I tried the best I could to get him drunk."

"Frank told me this, 'Alex, my days are numbered. I will never serve another day in the workhouse as long as I live. I shall always be sorry that I didn't kill Max (Hannon). I hunted for him for three days with a gun and I couldn't find him.'"

Supreme Court Justice George W. Maxey, presiding, sustained Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti's objection that reference to Hannon and the workhouse be stricken from the record.

Earlier W. Pat Collins, a Uniontown political leader, had testified: "He (Monaghan) said he wouldn't spend another day in jail. I'll cut somebody's throat before the night's over and that means the law.' I pleaded with him not to."

Margiotti started the State's rebuttal by calling Capt. Thomas F. Martin of the State police to explain the teaching of jiu-jitsu which Gunderman testified he had used to throw Monaghan over his head in self-defense.

Mayor John Q. Adams and Police Chief David McDonald of Uniontown, testified for the defense that they had turned over to Monaghan's son an envelope which the State contends contained reports of an investigation affecting Wall and District Attorney James A. Reilly, one of the six other Uniontown peace officers indicted with Gunderman.

Both Reilly and Wall have denied they knew anything about the report the night they stopped Monaghan's car.

Private Harold W. Stansfield, State police instructor, testified he had broken three ribs by being thrown with a jiu-jitsu hold like the one Gunderman said he used on Monaghan.

Eleven of Monaghan's ribs were broken, besides his skull, jaw, and nose, five physicians had testified.

West Coast Town Deserted in Yearly Silver Fish Rush

Longview, Wash., Feb. 23 (AP).—Longview's householders—once-a-year fishermen—grabbed up baby carriage, birdcage, or anything else that will hold a fish and went down to meet the smelt run of the Cowlitz River today.

Once a year the small, silver-flecked fish come by the thousands to spawn in the shallow waters of the Cowlitz, and with them come the townspeople in a scramble to dip their weight in seafood from the fish-glutted river.

Women and children as well as men took part in the river harvest, but initial results were below general expectation. Professional fishermen working in the Columbia River already had taken out 7,000 boxes of smelt to be shipped to Eastern markets.

Tydings Swells Bloc Opposing Court Change

Maryland Senator Asks Amendment as House Leaders, Roosevelt Talk.

adjournment, not only because of the court issue, but also because of the need of dealing with such things as farm tenancy, drought and reorganization," Speaker Bankhead said.

Earlier yesterday Speaker Bankhead and three of his House leaders had conferred with the President at the White House on the general legislative situation, including the court issue. They said they were disposed to let the Senate act first on the judiciary program, but if Senate hearings were unduly prolonged, the House Judiciary Committee might act. The House Judiciary group has called a meeting for tomorrow.

Labor Message Discussed.

The legislative review at the White House is said to have involved not only the farm tenancy and crop insurance messages already sent to Congress, but an expected future message on labor relations. Besides the court issue, other Administration measures clogging Congressional machinery are the Government reorganization plan, neutrality and an expected request for reenactment of the $500,000,000 in expiring nuisance levies.

Accompanying the Speaker to the White House were House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, Representative Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Representative Patrick Boland, of Pennsylvania, House whip. Boland is believed to have expressed to the President his known view that the court plan can pass the House, although he has not yet made a poll on the issue.

Sponsors Retirement Bill.

Representative Sumners is author of the Supreme Court voluntary retirement bill, scheduled to come up in the Senate today or tomorrow, and already passed by the House. The retirement bill is not part of the President's program, but he is not opposing its passage. Still an unknown quantity in the judiciary dilemma, the retirement measure has been seized on by many Administration Democrats as a possible means of avoiding court enlargement by six justices.

Briefly, the bill permits justices to retire with full pay guarantees at 70, subject to recall to active service, with their own consent, in the circuits. When the measure was before the House last session, word was passed that at least two justices would retire on its passage. Although there are no such present assurances, the bill is frankly favored by some Democrats in the hope that retirements may follow, and demand for the President's plan diminish.

Files Committee Report.

Senator McCarran, who is handling the retirement bill in the Senate, said he will attempt to call it up for debate today. Yesterday he filed the Judiciary Committee's favorable report, pointing out that Supreme Court justices are now excluded from the privilege of retiring granted other Federal judges after ten years' service.

"A justice of the Supreme Court, on retiring, would be relieved from regular active service except such as he might choose to undertake if called upon and authorized by the Chief Justice, to be performed in any judicial circuit, including the duties of a circuit court justice," the report explained. "A justice of the Supreme Court, on retiring, would not thereafter sit as a member of the Supreme Court."

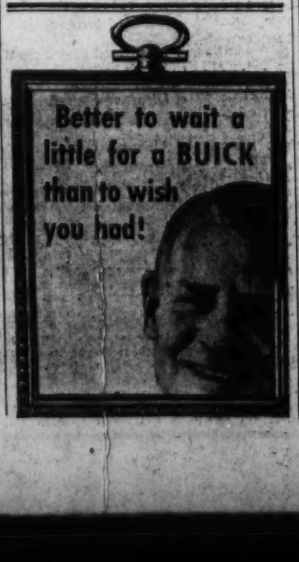
Senate action on the retirement bill this week will depend on the speed with which the reciprocal tariff act etxension is disposed of, but passage is taken for granted.

Tempest Peak March 9.

The full force of the pro and con tempest on the judiciary program is expected to break around the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings March 9. House Judiciary Committee members are expected to attend the hearings, to avoid the necessity of duplication of testimony in the House.

On March 8, the day preceding the hearing, State chairmen and delegates of Labor's Non-partisan League, political labor organization in which John L. Lewis is a dominant figure, will meet here in national convention.

"The meeting will mark the climax of an intensive campaign by the league throughout the Nation to show Congress and the country that labor is solidly behind the President in his efforts to modernize the Federal judiciary," Maj. George L. Berry, president of the league, said in a statement.



'Private Exploiters' Assailed By Ickes in New York Speech

Rod and Gun Editors Hear Proposed Department of Conservation Praised by Interior Secretary After Award to Roosevelt.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes told the New York Rod and Gun Editors Association tonight that "the period of delivering up our heritage to private exploiters has passed."

Speaking as the representative of President Roosevelt, who was selected as the recipient of the association's 1937 conservation award Secretary Ickes asserted "we have already permitted too deep a dipping into our natural resources for the good of the Nation."

"There can be no doubt today that the prudent use of what remains of our resources, as against continued reckless exploitation, should become a fixed policy of Government," he said.

Ickes lauded the President's proposal to change the Department of Interior to the Federal Department of Conservation, a plan which the association described, in awarding Mr. Roosevelt its conservation award, as "having possibilities of the greatest significance * * * an opportunity to end the overlapping and conflicting functions in Federal administration of natural resources."

"I hope that this change will become effective because it has within it the possibilities of a great advancement all along the line for conservation," Ickes said.

"In preserving this award to the President you have in effect declared that, in your opinion, he is the outstanding conservationist in the country. And you are right."

Secretary Ickes read a brief message to the association from President Roosevelt, who said, "For our own self-protection we must all dedicate ourselves to the cause of true conservation."

American Bar Chief Assailed by Jurist

Oklahoma City, Feb. 23 (AP).—Justice James I. Phelps of the Oklahoma Supreme Court, addressed a letter today to the President of the American Bar Association charging he "acted as the partisan counsel for the Liberty League" in criticizing proposed judicial changes.

The letter was written after the association president, Frederick H. Stinchfield, made a radio address in which he discussed President Roosevelt's proposals for judicial reorganization.

Child Labor Bill Decision Delayed

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 23 (AP).—Final action on ratification of the Federal child labor amendment in President Roosevelt's home State appeared likely tonight to be delayed at least two weeks.

The Republican-dominated Assembly judiciary committee withheld making a decision on the long-pending proposal at its weekly conference until the record of yesterday's public hearing is available for study, probably late this week.

Only favorable action of the Assembly—76 Republicans and 74 Democrats—is needed to make New York the twenty-eighth State to ratify, the Democratic-controlled Senate already having acted favorably.

Continental Co. Is Found Liable In U. S. Court

Other Claims Against Trust Firm to Be Investigated by Judicial Order.

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed the $1,000,000 liability of the closed Continental Trust Co., under an assessment of the Comptroller of Currency.

The court, however, directed the District Court to inquire into the legality of $375,050 in claims against the Continental, which had been filed by the Comptroller.

The ruling of the court was substantiated in the case of Dunn vs. O'Connor, which has been in the process of litigation for two years and involves the closing of the Commercial and District National banks, and the United States Savings Bank as well as the Continental.

The claims, which the appelate court remanded for further examination, were by the Commercial, District and the United States banks for loans allegedly made to the Continental for the purpose of making purchase by the Continental of stock in the Commercial.

The Continental stockholders, who brought suit against Comptroller O'Connor, contended the debts were incurred unlawfully, since the banks which were lending knew the money was to be used for purchasing stock in another institution.

Banking statutes make it illegal for a trust company to purchase the stock of another bank.

U. S. Junior Bar Asks Sentiment On Court Plan

Begins Drive to Assemble Opinion on Reform Proposal.

A Nation-wide campaign to stimulate public discussion of the arguments for and against the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court, to inform the public of the issues involved, and to persuade citizens to register their views with Congress has been inaugurated by the Junior Bar Conference of the American Bar Association, it was announced yesterday by Paul F. Hannah, Secretary of the Conference.

The campaign will be conducted through open-forum meetings, radio debates, speakers before civic organizations and "town-hall" discussions, arranged by conference members.

Grant B. Cooper, Los Angeles, Calif., chairman of the conference activities committee, is in direct charge of the campaign. The campaign will be conducted in each State through State, local, and district chairman of the conference.

By direction of the executive council, the secretary has called upon each of the 4,100 members of the conference to participate in the campaign, to register directly and immediately his individual views, as a citizen, with his members of Congress, and to have his friends and acquaintances express their opinions to their congressmen at the earliest date.

The program is to be conducted, it was announced, pending publication of the results of a referendum on the President's proposals for judicial reform now being taken of all American Bar Association members. In this referendum, the votes of conference members are being counted separately.

The conference is composed of American Bar Association members under 36. Joseph D. Stecher, Toledo, Ohio, is chairman; Robert W. Pharr, Memphis, Tenn., is vice chairman, and Paul F. Hannah, Washington, is secretary. The conference is governed by an executive council, consisting of the officers, the last retiring chairman, and one person from each Federal judicial circuit. Charles E. Pledger, jr., is the member of the council from the District of Columbia.

1-Man Legislature Advocated in West By Lieut. Governor

Olympia, Wash., Feb. 23 (AP).—Still in possession of his Hollywood mustache—"and my faculties, too"—Band Leading Lieut. Gov. Victor Aloysius Meyers advocated "a one-man Legislature" today.

The proposal was more or less retailiatory. The State Senate administration majority, Meyers said in an interview, is studying procedure to abolish his job, a move permitted under the constitution.

"Most of these legisiators are just stooges for the Governor anyway," he asserted. "He cracks the whip and they jump through the hoop. They don't think for themselves. They wait until the Governor sends them an idea through a mental pneumatic tube and presto! They're happy as a child with a new toy.

"So, let's have a one-man Legislature and send them all home. That would save the State $170,000."

Recently House Speaker Edward Meyers mustache hair by hair. J. Reilly threatened to uproot the Fire, Whipped By Gale, Razes Alaskan Town

Juneau Suburb Destroyed for Third Time; Firemen Use Dynamite.

By the Associated Press.

Juneau, Alaska, Feb. 23.—Gale-driven fire whipped through nearby Douglas today, defying a small army of trained and volunteer fire fighters, and virtually wiped out the town of 300.

The fire broke out at 5:30 a. m. and four hours later almost the entire community was in ashes. Douglas and Juneau fire departments, the Coast Guard cutter Tallapoosa and hundreds of citizens fought desperately but in vain against the blazes which rode across town on a southeast wind.

The gale carried hot embers three blocks ahead of the main fire, igniting one building after another. The flames were checked about noon after fire fighters resorted to dynamite.

Suburb of Juneau.

No serious casualties were reported from the town, a suburb of Juneau.

Starting in an oil burner in a grocery store, the flames spread through the town to destroy the fire station, school, the Douglas Inn, Odd Fellows and Eagles lodge halls, 10 stores, a new apartment building and 15 frame dwellings, with most of their contents.

Only one business structure, a drug store at the approach to the city wharf, remained standing.

Third Disastrous Fire.

It was the third disastrous fire to sweep Douglas in 25 years.

A quarter century ago a $100,000 fire engulfed the town. Ten years ago flames again razed the community.

Douglas is a fishing and salmon packing town, also drawing largely for its revenues on the famous Treadwell mines. It is connected with Juneau by a bridge across which hundreds of motorists poured today to aid fire fighters when the flames were at their height.

Lindberghs 'Lost' On Flight to India

Bombay, Feb. 23 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, unreported since early Monday on a flight from Jodhpur, still were "lost" tonight somewhere over India's vast distances.

Fears for their safety, however, had not become serious. It was believed airport officials probably had co-operated to help keep their arrivals and departures secret.

An airplane crash anywhere in northern India, authorities pointed out, surely would have become known by this time. They said if the Lindberghs' orange and black monoplane, in which the flying couple presumably was en route to Delhi, had come down at a remote airport there might be no report of it—especially if, as is their custom, the Lindberghs requested secrecy.

Great-Great-Grandson Of Charles Dickens Born

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—The birth of another Charles Dickens, great-great-grandson of the famous writer, was announced today, four months after the death of the infant's father.

The baby is the son of Mrs. Joy Dickens, widow of Lieut. Charles Dickens, who died last November 17.

Atlantic Fleet Commander From 1916 to 1919 Held Many Decorations.

Admiral Henry T. Mayo, war time commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, and outstanding Naval figure, died at the home of a son in Portsmouth, N. H., yesterday, according to announcement by the Navy Department. He was 80 years old. He had been in ill health for the past two months.

Known as a rigid upholder of the highest standards of the Navy, the admiral advocated a "lion" navy at the conclusion of the World War.

Explaining many were predicting the coming universal peace when the lion and the lamb would lie down together, he declared that when that day came he wanted the United States to be the lion.

On the active list of the Navy for 48½ years, he was appointed commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet in June, 1916, serving in that post until July 2, 1919. He retired from active duty in December, 1920, but continued to hold important land positions until 1928.

General Board Member.

Following his retirement as chief of the American vessels in American and European waters, he became a member of the Navy's General Board, the omnipotent organization which advises the Secretary of the Navy on matters of policy. At the time of Admiral Mayo's leaving the general board, the then Secretary Josephius Daniels wrote to him:

"It is a matter of congratulation that while under your command the United States fleet reached its highest efficiency and made its largest contribution in the World War.

"When we entered the war, largely due to your direction, the fleet was in its highest state of readiness. Your service abroad was not only recognized by your countrymen, but by naval leaders of the allied nations. * * * Your long service in peace and in war * * * eminently qualified you to close your active career as a member of the highest board in the Navy."

Admiral Mayo was decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal for war-time services, with the citation: "For exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great esponsibility as commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet in conection with the organization, training and maintaining of the fleet in a condition for war."

Legion of Honor.

He also was awarded the decoration of "Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor of France" for exceptional services in the conduct of the war against the Central Empires." His other awards included the Grand Cordon of the Rising Sun, awarded him by the Japanese Government.

During his nearly 29 years of sea duty he was frequently in the public eye. Most spectacular was the incident in Mexico, in April, 1914, which resulted in a "war scare" in which President Wilson considered calling out Army and Navy against the unrecognized Huerta regime.

On April 9, 1915, an armed squad of Mexican soldiers arrested the paymaster and seven unarmed men of the U. S. S. Dolphin, at Tampico. The commanding officer of the Huerta forces, Gen. Zaragoza, apologized for the incident, but Mayo demanded a more formal apology for the serious offense. His stand was backed up by Secretary of State Bryan, and a "war scare" resulted when several similar incidents coming immediately afterward roused President Wilson's ire.

A native of Burlington, Vt., Admiral Mayo was born December 8, 1855, and appointed a cadet midshipman in 1872. Following graduation from the Naval Academy, he was promoted through the regular grades, becoming a full commander in 1905, a captain in 1908 and a rear admiral in 1913.

Spanish-American Veteran.

During the Spanish-American War he held the rank of lieutenant, and later lieutenant commander, serving on the Bennington and Independence.

His tour of duty included service in Washington, first as aide for personnel at the Navy Department previous to his commission as rear admiral, and later as a member of the general board.

His stations included commandant of Mare Island Navy Yard; commandant of the Fourth, and later of the First division of the Atlantic fleet, and second in command of the Atlantic fleet. From 1924 to 1928 he served as governor of the Naval Home at Philadelphia.

His wife, Caroline Wing Mayo, and two sons, Capt. Mayo, of the Navy, and Maj. George Mayo, of the United States Army, survive.

Funeral services will be held Friday at his home. Final burial will be in Burlington in the spring.

Charles E. Woodward.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 25.—Funeral services were held this afternoon for Charles E. Woodward, 41, life long resident of Stafford County who died at his home Sunday morning after an illness of five months.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ina Stevens Woodward; two sons, Charles E. Woodward, jr., and Earl Woodward; three brothers, Andrew J. Woodward, Denver, Colo., William M. Woodward, Richmond, and French E. Woodward, Stafford, and one sister, Mrs. R. G. Dent, Stafford.

Scully to Serve Term in Prison For Car Deaths

Winchester Lawyer Given 3½ Years; Withdraws New Trial Plea.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 23 (AP).—Thomas G. Scully, 23-year-old Winchester lawyer, was sentenced to two 3½-year terms in the penitentiary, to run concurrently, today after withdrawing a motion for a new trial on a charge of involuntary manslaughter in connection with the death of Frederick M. Affleck Christmas night.

Judge Philip Williams, of the Frederick County Circuit Court, imposed the second sentence for the death of Homer Hock, who was killed with Affleck when an automobile smashed into a small group of men on the highway 2 miles north of Winchester.

The second charge was submitted to the court by agreement of attorneys after the motion for a new trial was withdrawn.

Continues on Bond.

The young attorney continued at liberty under $10,000 bond pending his removal to the penitentiary to begin serving his term March 3. With half time off for good behavior, Scully would have to serve but 21 months.

Commonwealth's Attorney Burr P. Harrison recommended that the court impose "such sentence as may be deemed proper, not to exceed three and one-half years, to run concurrently" in the Hook case in consideration of the defendant's abandonment of "any effort to upset the verdict."

In passing sentence, Judge Williams declared the young lawyer's character was in "a different state" from that of a "mature character," and said that if an older man had been before him under the same circumstances, he could not say "I would permit the sentences to run concurrently."

Warns of Ordeal.

"So far as the law is concerned with dealing with reform," the court added, "the defendant's character is largely unformed and if the court undertook to impose an additional 3½-year sentence, the effect sought would be the opposite, so far as reform is concerned."

Reminding the young defendant he had never been deprived of his freedom, the court advised him to prepare himself for the punishment.

"The right attitude," Judge Williams said, "is to accept the sentence as a challenge in such a way that when you have gotten through you can show the world your character has not been destroyed."

Much of the testimony at Scully's trial hinged on whether Scully was under the influence of liquor when his automobile crashed into a group of men placing the body of Dewey Newlin in an ambulance beside the three-lane Martinsburg turnpike.

Newlin had been killed while walking along the highway an hour before Affleck and Hook met death.

Science Church Lecturer Gives Talk at Theater

A lecture on "Christian Science: The Religion and Medicine of Christ" was delivered yesterday at the National Theater by Dr. John M. Tutt, C. S. B., of Kansas City, Mo. Dr. Tutt is a member of the board of lectureship of the mother church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Boston, Mass. He was introduced by Bernard C. Duncan, First Reader of First Church, which sponsored the lecture.

The lecturer said in part:

The natural oneness of religion and medicine is indicated by the early efforts of humanity to express that essential unity in speech. The root word for health and holiness in the Anglo-Saxon, and in more primitive tongues, is the same, and it means wholeness, completeness. Again, the Scriptures sustain the essential unity of religion and medicine. Prophets and psalmists and preachers, kings and commoners throughout the Bible, when they turned to God as a very present help in all sorts of trouble, were healed and saved from sin and disease.

Christ Jesus earned the appellation, The Great Physician, not because he was a graduate of some medical college, or versed in the material medicine of his day, but because he was literally a healer of body and mind, a healer that never failed. But can you imagine Jesus subscribing to the crude theories and methods of the physicians of his times? Indeed, can you think of him wielding an ether cone or scalpel before a modern clinic?

Whatever it was that divorced the healing and saving arts, and whenever that calamity befell the human race and the hospital and the doctor took up their abode on the opposite side of the street from the church and its ministers, certain it is that Jesus, by his purely spiritual precepts and practice, reunited these great ministries as one in his theology and medicine.

Marylander is Shot, Killed by Colored Man

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—Ted Maith, 34-year-old colored man, shot and killed L. W. Parsons, Salisbury liquor salesman, tonight just outside the front door of Maith's home.

One of the eyewitnesses, Sadie Brown, a neighbor of the Maiths, Sheriff J. N. Bennett said, told him the exchange between the two men concerned Maith's wife, Coronis, 30, operator of a beer tavern nearby.

Jennie Capers, U.D.C. Member, Funeral Held

'Spirit of the Old South,' 89, Came Through Union Lines to D. C.

Funeral services for Mrs. Jennie Buckner Capers, 89, known to her friends as "the spirit of the Old South," were held yesterday afternoon at 1749 Park road, where she died Saturday following a short illness. She was buried in Ivy Hill Cemetery at Alexandria.

Born on her father's plantation near Gainsville, Va., Mrs. Capers was educated in Richmond during the Civil War. Shortly before the fall of Richmond, she and her sister were brought to Washington. Their safe passage through Union lines was arranged by Montgomery Blair, Postmaster General in President Lincoln's Cabinet.

One of Mrs. Capers most treasured possessions was a lock of Gen. "Stonewall" Jackson's hair. She attended the Confederate general's funeral at Lexington, Va.

Both of Mrs. Caper's husbands were officers in the Confederate Army. Her first husband, was Maj. Hugh G. Gwyn. After his death she married Col. Henry D. Capers. He died about 18 years ago. Mrs. Capers had been active in the United Daughters of the Confederacy and was present at many Confederate reunions.

Besides a son, Childress Buckner Gwyn, with whom she lived, Mrs. Capers is survived by three grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

FURNITURE, SIXTH FLOOR

Eastern Star Will Dedicate Home Tonight

Former Belmont Mansion, Where Wales Stayed, Is Converted.

Walls of the mansion "where the Prince of Wales stayed," will echo the footsteps of a different type of royalty tonight when members of the Order of the Eastern Star pour into the ballroom for the formal dedication of the organization's new national headquarters.

Formerly known as the "Perry Belmont Mansion," the house at 1618 New Hampshire avenue that was built in 1909 has been "done over" from basement to third-floor ceiling, has been decorated and furnished in strict conformity with the period of the building, and is now ready for occupancy by the national staff of the Order of the Eastern Star.

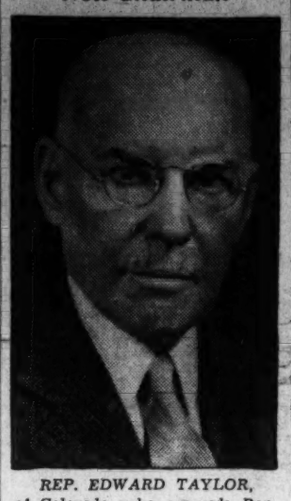
Offices, the family dining room and two bedrooms and baths on the first floor are filled with handsome pieces of furniture tastefully arranged and on rich rugs. The walls are paneled in rose brocade and polished wood. A gilt, glass-topped show case in a corner of one office contains an autographed pohtograpn of the Prince of Wales in 1919, when he visited in Washington and accepted the invitation of Perry Belmont to make the house his headquarters.

Gilt and crystal chandeliers that glowed on many noted men and women in the past have been retained throughout the mansion. The round, white entrance with its medallions and electric wall candles and marble floor presents an immaculte aspect warmed by rose draperies at windows and inside the huge, iron-grated entrance door.

The front room on the second floor is to be used as a chapel by the O. E. S. and has been furnished for that purpose. Large meetings, such as the one tonight, are to be held in the huge ballroom, where rose hangings, a hands me mantelpiece, oil paintings and gilt furniture present a palatial aspect.

The state dining room opening off the ballroom is floored with Italian marble and decorated with an imported Italian mantel, four towering torcheres, carved chests and a massive rectangular table. The ceiling with inlays of polished wood and tourquoise colored stone was brought piece by piece from an Italian palace. In contrast, the ceiling decoration of the family dining room on the first floor is strictly American. An oval oil painting, representing the five star-points in colors and emblems of the Eastern Star, was executed by Mrs. Eugenie Deland Saugsted, of Washington.

New Chairman



REP. EDWARD TAYLOR, of Colorado, who succeeds Representative James Buchanan as chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. Taylor, at 78, is the oldest member of the House. Funeral services for his predecessor, Buchanan, who died late Monday, will be held in Brenham, Tex., Friday afternoon. Buchanan was highly praised yesterday by President Roosevelt as "a faithful and wise counsellor," and by Vice President Garner.

Capital Physician Warns Congress To Guard Health

By the Associated Press.

An appeal for members of Congress to guard their health came yesterday from Dr. George W. Calver, the Capitol physician, following the death of Representative James P. Buchanan, of Texas, fourth House leader to succumb since the New Deal began.

"Most members," said Dr. Calver, "lead a sedentary life, working maybe 20 hours a day under a heavy mental strain and not getting any exercise or getting out and getting air and oxygen into their blood.

"It is not unreasonable to expect a man to devote 5 per cent of his time to keeping physically efficient instead of sacrificing himself and depriving the Nation of his experience and ability.

"The best example of the benefits of that is the man in the White House."

Six Sit-Down Strikes Silence Detroit Plants

Boat Workers Strike.

By the Associated Press.

Groton, Conn., Feb. 23.—The Electric Boat Company, builders of submarines for the U. S Navy, suspended the night shift at its shipyard on the Thames river here tonight because of a "sit-down" strike called at the plant earlier in the day.

O. P. Robinson, work manager, said 350 men reported as usual for work this evening, but were told to go home "because we didn't want any trouble."

About 50 men stayed in the plan, he said, after the day shift of about 1,700 employes quit work. He asserted the company planned to resume operations as usual tomorrow.

'Mutual' Strike Ends.

Detroit, Feb. 23 (AP).—The boss moved out of his office after his employes had moved out of the plant at the Fry Products, Inc., today, the first mutual strike in industrial history ended by agreement.

Walter L. Fry, president and chief salesman who matched his employes' sit-down strike hour for hour, went back to work immediately, soliciting orders for automobile seat covers.

When the last employe had left the plant Fry departed also, accompanied by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Fry were celebrating their twenty-second anniversary.

The employes will return to work Thursday morning under terms of an agreement effected last midnight.

Shoe Strike Looms.

Boston, Feb. 23 (AP).—The general executive board of the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union tonight voted 5 to 1 to call a general strike effective tomorrow in all factories in its jurisdiction unless a flat 15 per cent wage increase is granted immediately.

The announcement of the strike vote came from William B. Mahan, general organizer for the union. He said the Union Shoe Workers in a poll today voted in favor of demanding a 15 per cent increase immediately.

A majority of shoe manufacturers had made a compromise offer of a 10 per cent wage increase immediately and 5 per cent additional July 1.

Mahan said picketing would begin tomorrow at the factories of shoe companies refusing to meet the union's demands.

Strike Bill Pushed.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Indiana Legislature today pushed toward final enactment a bill which State administration leaders said would give Indiana "an easy way out" of labor disputes.

The bill provides for the appointment by the Governor of a State labor commissioner and makes it mandatory for disputants to agree to mediation by the commissioner.

Martial Law Ends.

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 23 (AP).—Military rule of Anderson, fastened upon this industrial city February 13 following violence between union and nonunion automotive craftsmen, ended late today by order of Gov. M. Clifford Townsend.

Gov. Townsend lifted his martial law order with the statement that an investigation showed Madison County "is now in a State of order and that the civil authorities of the county are well able and sufficient to maintain law and order."

The troops left to civil authorities the prosecution of 19 men, indicted on charges of rout and riot in connection with the February 13 disturbances.

Horner Intervenes.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 23 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner assumed the role of intermediary today in an effort to break the deadlock in the week-old "sit down" strike at the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation in North Chicago.

He conferred with company officials and arranged to meet spokesmen for the 80 men holding two of the Fansteel buildings despite a court order directing their removal.

President R. J. Aitchison, of the corporation, declined to discuss the stalemate with C. I. O. leaders representing the "sit downers" on the grounds that they were "outside organizers."

Securities Act Invalid.

Edmonton, Alberta, Feb. 23 (Canadian Press).—The Alberta securities act, under which the provincial government reduced interest on Alberta bonds and guaranteed securities, was declared unconstitutional today.

Lansburghs Fashion Authorities Say THISTLE*

"Thistle" is that marvelously becoming new color—a pinkish, grayish violet. We had our first tip to watch it way back in the first part of December. Jeanne Lombard, Fashion Director of our New York Offices, sent us a swatch of Thistle-dyed fabric. Shortly after, she reported that manufacturers were cutting Thistle, expected it to be the big new color for spring. At the Amos Parrish Fashion Clinic our buyers heard more about this color trend. Women's Wear Daily reported it again and again. Cables from the Paris Openings emphasized pinkish mauve tones. We bought a few spring suits in Thistle and watched—they were snatched up. We saw that Thistle is an easy color to wear. We saw that it has that "something different" that you seek for your Easter outfits. So we went to market for Thistle in a grand manner—suits, coats, dresses, blouses, accessories. It's no hunch that covers Lansburgh's with plenty of this new color—we KNOW Thistle is good!

Flash! Dec. 2nd.

Jeanne Lombard, Our N. Y. Fashionist, Wired:

"Watch THISTLE. It is a new shade of pinkish violet with gray overtones. We believe that Thistle willl have the same sweeping success that Violet enjoyed, as we predicted last spring."

Flash! Feb. 17th

Women's Weat Daily Reported:

"THISTLE listed as best seller . . . Customers show much interest in that mauve-rose shade, which is also called St. James Rose . . . Customers have been asking for the THISTLE shade in blouses."

Flash! Feb. 19th

Babs Lincoln, Fashion Columnist of the Washington Herald, says:

"Thistle appears in smart places around town. That enchanting pinkish mauve shade called 'thistle' is the big style excitement for spring. It's beautiful with navy, with black and in other color combinations.

Great In Anonymity.

Rollo Ogden, successively the editor of the New York Evening Post and the New York Times, was an outstanding illustration of that merger of a man with an organization which the modern newspaper demands. For all the magnitude of his contribution, relatively few outside the journalistic profession were familiar with his name. But the newspapers over whose editorial destinies he presided were national institutions. And in making them so Mr. Ogden played no inconsiderable part.

The contemporary newspaper, both a reflection and a determinant of its environment, is a far cry from those broadsheets of Addison and Steele which are its lineal ancestors. The journal of today is—or should be—more concerned with information than opinion. Its product is the sum of much individual research, and it is on the smooth synthesis of the separate contributions, on their skillful and judicious assembly into a well-rounded product, that the character of the modern newspaper primarily depends.

Nevertheless it is still true, and with a free press will always be true, that over and above its bodily attributes stands the personality of a newspaper. And personalities—whether colorless or vivid, superficial or thoughtful, vulgar or pontifical—newspapers do possess, far more than might be expected in productions so essentially cooperative in character.

The building of newspaper personality, the creation of a product which is greater than the total of its parts, was a deep concern with Rollo Ogden throughout the full half century in which he was a vital part of the story of American journalism. The extent to which he fulfilled this self-assignment is indicated by the high repute of the newspapers for which he worked, during the term of his association.

In the preface to his compilation of Henry Watterson's editorials Arthur Krock, himself a famous member of the Times' family, asserted that "Mr. Watterson was the last of the great editors, for the reason that he was the last of those editors who wrote with the power of ownership."

That provocative observation was made about the time that Rollo Ogden joined the staff of the New York Times. It is possible that this editor's contribution would modify Mr. Krock to modify his opinion of 15 years ago. For the work of Mr. Ogden was of that type which successfully surmounts anonymity, self-effacement, even subordination, to build the collective product which himself properly termed "greater and more important than any one man."

The Sensible Way.

The Senate Finance Committee has wisely decided to seek expert advice before proceeding to revise the social security act, spurred on by Senator Vandenberg's criticism of the plan for creating a self-sustaining reserve system, the Finance Committee has appointed three of its members, Senators Vandenberg, Byrd and Harrison, to confer with the Social Security Board and choose a "disinterested" advisory committee to study the subject.

The bipartisan character of the Senate's special committee, and the reputation for open-mindedness of the Social Security Board, combine to augur well for a thoughtful and thoroughgoing report. Dr. A. J. Altmeyer, the new chairman of the board, like his able predecessor, former Gov. Winant, shows a readiness to consider proposals for change, strictly on their merits, regardless of the partisan affiliations of critics.

If legislators, administrators and experts are all animated by a desire to better the existing social insurance system instead of trying to make political capital out of discrediting or defending it, there is little danger that necessary reforms will be rejected. The complexity and extreme difficulty of the problems that confront the Social Security Board, and the experimental character of the laws under which it is operating, would make it very easy so to confuse the issues of revision that nothing could be accomplished in the way of constructive reform.

The advantage of having nonpartisan experts to head the new social security organization is emphasized by their manner of responding to legislative suggestions. Friendly co-operation between the legislative and administrative agencies of government in working out reform measures would save us from many mistakes and improve the results of a great deal of the current legislative output.

New York And Child Labor.

Himself a resident of New York, as well as a former Governor of that State, President Roosevelt was entirely in order in making a personal appeal to the New York Assembly to concur with the Senate and ratify the Federal child labor amendment.

This enabling act has thus far been approved by 27 States. It needs only nine more ratifications to authorize Congress to regulate child labor on a Nation-wide basis. For this reason, and also because of New York's industrial and commercial importance, the action to be taken by the Assembly is of great general interest. Should it act in accordance with the pleas of President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman, victory in the long fight for this amendment will be in sight. On the other hand, the rejection of the amendment by the lower house of the New York Legislature would be a serious setback. No wonder, then, that there has been a great massing of forces at Albany, both by the advocates and the opponents of the amendment.

Viewed from a selfish as well as a humanitarian point of view, it seems to New York's interest to line up with the 27 States now definitely in the affirmative camp. As a State which has led in the field of social legislation, there is little risk of local disadvantage in a Federal child labor law designed to bring more backward States in line.

Presumably that is why there are few spokesmen of industrial interests among those who have gone to Albany to speak against the amendment. The opposition comes from those who are fearful that the wording of the amendment is too broad and sweeping. Yet it is unlikely that any child-labor law approved by Congress would be more drastic than is the New York State law itself.

An interesting and significant indication of what a cross-section of the people of the Empire State themselves think on the subject is to be found in the latest poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion. This shows 83 per cent of those "sampled" in New York in favor of the pending amendment. The favorable percentage is larger than that in all but five other States—Colorado, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Wisconsin. Of these, all but Rhode Island have already ratified the proposed change in the Constitution.

Truce In China?

Since the Sian kidnaping episode of last December, the paramount question in China has been whether the central government should or should not co-operate with the Chinese Communist forces in the northwest in a common program of resistance to further Japanese encroachments.

This question has almost rent the Nanking regime in twain. Both before and since Chiang Kai-shek's release from captivity, one element in the government has insisted that there be no compromise with the reds. It was this element which vainly demanded bombardment of Sian, even though such action might have meant Chiang's doom. Perhaps they hoped to kill two birds with one stone—to get rid of Chiang while forcing a new campaign against the so-called Chinese Soviet republic.

It is interesting to notice that the leaders of the Chinese reds have now declared their willingness to make substantial concessions in order to set the stage for an anti-Japanese front. In an interview with a correspondent of the New York Times, one of these leaders announced that if Nanking will agree to certain conditions, the Communists will cease their opposition to the central government, place their autonomous regime under Nanking's jurisdiction and stop confiscation of wealth and property in areas under their control.

In return, the central government must abandon its campaigns against the Communists, establish a regime of civil liberties in China, call a national congress to bring about a truly democratic form of government and unite all elements in China to oppose Japan.

Whether the government will agree to such conditions is problematical. In view of the Chinese genius for compromise, however, some kind of modus vivendi between Nanking and the reds may be worked out. There is increasing sentiment in China against the waste of national energies in futile civil wars.

In view of the fact that this attitude coincides with a rising tide of sentiment in Japan that the army's aggressive policy on the mainland has been wasteful and ineffective, the possibility of a Sino-Japanese truce, as well as of a truce between Nanking and the Chinese Communists, must be taken into consideration.

Crooning Cowboys.

The great American pastime of bringing up father is being applied to the cinema. When the "western" was the daddy of the movies, redskins bit the dust in pictures that flickered so badly it was difficult to distinguish romance from wrestling. Today, with movies going artistic, the producers seem determined to polish up "westerns" for polite society.

If this trend continues, grim heroes spurring to the rescue of beautiful heroines tied to railway tracks will soon be only memories. Million dollar productions are replacing the inexpensive thrills once induced by a case of blank cartridges and a lasso rope. Even the name "western serial" is losing favor before such competition as an "epic of empire building."

The movie is perversely reversing the trend of literature. It is attempting to make sophisticated art out of a popular institution. On the other hand, James Fenimore Cooper, Bret Harte and Mark Twain told western stories that became text-book classics before the Deadwood Dick and Nick Carter school reached full flower.

It is doubtful whether spectacular costumes, foreign accents, and orchestral effects will improve the old-fashioned western movie. Those who used to return on successive Saturday afternoons to learn the fate of Pearl White or William S. Hart may well dread the result of making cowboys out of crooners. Something should be done before Hollywood turns the whole Wild West into a dude ranch.

Practical Public Housing.

The Administration is indebted to the local housing committee of the American Association of Social Workers for a report outlining the first essentials of a practical public-housing program. In view of the anticipated legislation on this subject during the present session of Congress this advice should serve a most useful purpose.

For the most part, the report is confined to simple principles that should govern public-housing enterprises for families which lack the means to maintain a decent standard of living. Careful distinction is made between projects of this sort and a general housing program to be carried out by private industry. Confidence in the recommendations is further inspired by the fact that they closely follow the system already in effective use by the District Alley Dwelling Authority.

The committee suggests creation of a United States housing agency to make grants for slum reclamation and loans for housing. Grants would be made "only for site acquisition and development, or for specified administrative expenses, but not for construction." Behind this policy is the argument that some element of subsidy is essential to restore to a proper use areas that have been permitted to decay. But the committee opposes any direct building subsidy. Under this arrangement families unable to obtain adequate housing from their own incomes would have to be assisted through relief agencies.

Local agencies would assume responsibility for initiating all public-housing projects, whether using Federal, State or local funds. However, the Federal organization would be encouraged to build and manage demonstration projects at the invitation of local authorities. Such developments would be limited in scope. And at the end of the demonstration period they would be sold to local agencies.

One other function of the proposed Federal organization would be research designed to show the need for improved housing and to lower building costs.

All action under this plan would be predicated upon actual housing needs, with the provision of employment an incidental advantage. Before cities could obtain Federal funds for slum reclamation they would have to prove that minimum housing standards had been set up and enforced to prevent creation of new blighted areas.

It is evident that the committee sponsoring this program is interested in housing from the social rather than the relief viewpoint. Since practical plans of procedure have proved to be the missing link in so many housing policies already tried and proposed, this well-reasoned advice should be specially welcome to officials who are shaping the new housing bill.

Honest And Courageous.

James P. Buchanan was one of that fast-vanishing breed of elder legislators whose rudimentary but sound conception of economics revolved around the "taxpayers' dollar" and how to spend it thriftily, if not always wisely.

Economy in government was his credo. His futile insistence upon its application to the New Deal in a period when profligate spending was the order of the day led him into unpublicized clashes with department heads and even with the White House itself.

But Mr. Buchanan was, first of all, an orthodox Southern Democrat. And his party regularity in the showdown seldom yielded even to his own inbred belief that the Government's network of bureaus should be rigidly simplified and made closely accountable to Congress for every penny spent.

His last words to the House, on February 8, were a warning against "the unbridled discretion of men and a Government of extravagance and irresponsibility in the expenditure of money."

That his recurrent pleas for a balanced budget were voiced in a whirlwind of recovery expenditures, and that the House Appropriations Committee during his chairmanship authorized unprecedented peace-time billions, is a matter of ironic record.

Granting that record, Mr. Buchanan's restraining influence on incipient Treasury raids, and the service he rendered as chairman of the recently created House Reorganization Committee, cannot be measured in words or dollars. Congress has lost an individualist of the old school and a public servant as honest as he was courageous.

The "Pink Rider."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a lot of discussion concerning a legislative plan to gag teachers in the Nation's Capital which I believe goes under the title of the "red rider" and now masquerades as the "pink rider." To my way of thinking the whole thing is a rotten mess. Let's drop the whole color issue. Repeal the notorious Klan act which we all know former Representative Blanton's activities fostered.

Nobody knows what "communism" is. Every Tom, Dick and Harry thinks he knows what it is. Pin them down and they disagree like Kilkenny cats. This is proved when you take Father Edmund A. Walsh's definition that "sit-down strikes and the proposed reorganization of the Supreme Court" are "communism." Compare that with Representative Ellenbogen's bill to limit rent prices which another Congressman called "socialism." Every one of us has his own pet peeve and we call that "communism."

Mrs. Mary Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the District committee, is entirely right in demanding complete repeal. This is not to protect the teachers but to protect the children in their right to know the truth. J. ANDREWS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.

Youth Act Prospects.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How hypocritical is the attitude of the New Deal in its dealing with the problem of youth and employment!

When yesterday six delegates to the national youth pilgrimage spoke to the President they were smilingly assured of Mr. Roosevelt's sympathy, but not his support of the national youth act. He could feel for youth, but he could not seem to reach them. The money to be spent to save youth under the act "would upset budgetary plans"—this from the "great humanitarian" who sets human needs above property rights.

Yet the New Deal does not cry out when youth is forced into the Army against his will; does not cry out against a billion-dollar war machine. Oh no, the cost of preparing cannon fodder is perfectly all right with the New Deal. And so, these undercover recruiting bases for the regular Army, the public employment centers and CCC, will continue, while the national youth act will be scuttled.

BOB LEVINS.

Washington, Feb. 21.

War Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with some surprise that I regarded the page of illustrations from the time of the World War republished in The Post of February 21. What end is to be served in reproducing such pictures or reviving questions of polemic or propaganda 20 years after they had passed into oblivion?

The only explanation that suggests itself is that this is a subtle form of German propaganda. That country having repudiated the last vestiges of the Treaty of Versailles, including the admission of war guilt, now tries to pose as the victim, not the author, of the world disaster of 1914.

All that remained was the story of the ruthlessness and frightfulness with which the central powers prosecuted that war, as recorded by word and picture. If these powers could now carry out a white-washing process, tending to show that all the accusations of ruthlessness were mere enemy propaganda, without any basis of truth, the rehabilitation of Germany would be complete.

If with this end in view all the horrors of the four years of war are to be reproduced afresh, in order that they may be branded as mere inventions of the enemy, I think that the public has the right to protest.

Besides, this is playing with a double-edged weapon. If the nations thus attacked should reply in kind, should re-open their archives and bring forth all they contain of the horrors of war, in word and picture, there would be such an avalanche of these that the new case of the central powers would be worse than the first.

I was through the whole World War, from beginning to end, as a war correspondent, in France and in Italy and, after 1915, with the Serbian army and on the Salonica front and I can assure you that I could quote, not one but scores of cases of appalling ruthlessness and cruelty.

But what end would this serve? It would only revive feelings of rancor and hatred better forgotten. A new generation has grown up since the war ended to which that conflict is only a matter of history. The republication of stories and pictures can only tend to revive the national hatreds, which were beginning to die down and transplant them in the new generations and thus make them heirs to the sufferings and hatreds of their fathers.

SPECTATOR.

Washington, Feb. 20.

Sit-Down Strikers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit me to commend your timely warning, "A Two-Edged Weapon," in The Post of February 19. The seeds of lawlessness planted in the recent "sit-down" strike in Detroit, blessed by Dictator Lewis, condoned by our Secretary of Labor, and, almost unbelievable, even silently sanctioned by higher authority, are now sprouting in various parts of the country, and will lead to most serious consequences, unless officials drastically enforce the laws of the land.

It is lamentable that the latter have treated these pernicious lawbreakers like spoiled children, who wanted the whole cake, or none, thereby showing the same intolerance, greed and selfishness of which they accuse the so-called capitalists. RICHARD J. PAHNKE.

Washington, Feb. 21.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to your editorial condemning the recent sit-down strike in Michigan—I am getting a little tired and bored with all these prating moralists who spout for "social justice," but have no conception of the practical means necessary to obtain it. When will all the nice people learn that there is only one way for workers to gain their demands, and that is by fighting for them?

When General Motors flatly refused to recognize the union, there was only one thing left for all red-blooded working men—to fight for their rights. When will the pure and faint in heart understand that if the workers had not met the hard-fisted General Motors heads with their own weapons they would have gone down in defeat?

However, for the benefit of all the "naughty, naughty, musn't" moralists, the next time a strike is called anywhere, why not suggest to the labor leaders that they call in the strikers to sit on the back doorsteps of the mansion belonging to General Motors head and conduct a nice quiet purring bee?

The Hazen Committee.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While I am thoroughly in agreement with the proposal of Commissioner Hazen to appoint a committee of citizens to investigate the functions of the District government with a view of increasing its efficiency, yet I am inclined to think that such a committee, composed solely of businessmen, as contemplated by the Commissioner, will not be a representative group of District citizens unless there is appointed to it citizens who are members of Government lodges, trade unions and unemployed associations.

Businessmen are notorious for their desire to save money at the expense of the public's welfare. There is little question in my mind that if only businessmen are appointed, the result of the committee's work will be recommendations for severe curtailing of essential public activities by the District government.

It is likely that Commissioner Hazen will attempt to justify his appointing of businessmen to this committee on the grounds that business pays most of the taxes in the District and that businessmen are best qualified to serve by virtue of the fact that "they are in business." To this I should like to call the Commissioner's attention to the tax rolls which show that by far the majority of taxes collected in the District are paid by small property owners who are employed in the Government service.

To his other probable contention, I reply that many of the people in the Government service have devoted a lifetime to the study of governmental efficiency and in my estimation they are best qualified, both as citizens and experts, to serve on this committee. Not to give them such representation on any committee to reorganize the District government, would be doing them a grave injustice and deprive the majority of District citizens of a voice in any changes that may be made.

Argument For Naval Building.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Speaking of England spending $7,500,000,000 for her navy, I wish to join issue with the letter of J. E. Aiken published in your paper on February 20 in which he suggested the United States should not keep step with Britain in our national defense. I wish to show why an increase in our navy is the best protection and the cheapest safeguard to our independence.

"History repeats itself" is too old an adage to ignore. Thus to analyze the international conditions of 1937 presents a similar situation of 1914. War clouds are bigger and darker now than ever before in the history of this world. It is no secret of continuous increasing armament of all the major powers.

With undisputed knowledge of these facts, are we, the people of the United States of America, going to make the mistake we did in 1917? Are we going to wait until international complications draw us into another war unprepared as we were when we entered the last one?

It is not a question of the cost or a question of the need of other social organizations which alleviate human suffering in our country. It is not a question of offensive armaments versus defensive armaments. It is not a question of a war with England or that such new ships "will be obsolete after a few brilliant maneuvers." But it is a question of immediate protection for our country, our homes and our loved ones. "A navy second to none" is the best insurance policy our Congress can give us on our country.

The American people spend more money for insurance than the combined world. This proves we fear calamities. This proves we are willing to have the dangers of our happenings of tomorrow underwritten. Would not an increased navy be a similar way of underwriting the possibilities of the United States being attacked by some mercenary power? Would not this navy offer more security to our seaport towns which if destroyed represent more than the cost of building these ships?

The mistakes of 1917 show without doubt that it is cheaper to build a navy in peacetime than during a war. With the international conflict going on now in Spain without a formal declaration of war, why must we wait until labor and materials reach wartime prices to start our navy? Can this richest country afford to take the chance we once did? Let's profit by our experience in the last war by paying cheaper premiums now for protection.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

$7.70 A Week.

ONE of our beautiful male movie actors suffered a little embarrassment recently when his old and destitute grandfather bobbed up with an application for relief. The actor was said to be earning $3,500 a week, and the old gentleman, at the age of 84, was down to a diet of coffee, oatmeal and bread in a shack on an income of $4 a month. At first glimpse this would seem to be a flagrant case of neglect, but actually the young man was not far out of line. He was just $6.70 a week short of compliance with his moral obligation according to the famous American standard of living as established by public opinion through Congress in the income tax law.

• • • •

Congress took a very conservative stand on the American standard of living in the income tax law, but a much more liberal attitude is apparent in other actions of individual statesmen. They all hold strictly to the austere and simple standard in the maximum tax allowance of $400 a year for the support of children under 18 and of dependent grandfathers, grandmothers and other needy kin. But in their personal problems the members of the House and Senate often find that it takes from $100 to $250 a month to support a needy relative in the role of office clerk or secretary and put them on the public payroll at such amounts.

• • • •

In the present case the actor's old grandfather has a private income of $1 a week from the rent of two front rooms of his shack. This will have to be deducted, because otherwise, like Al Capone, the old gentleman might get 11 years in Alcatraz for concealing income. And the $1 a week would reduce the actor's obligation to about $6.70 a week, according to the Congressional version of the American standard. Of course, the actor might want to give the old man as much as $10 to $15 a week and pay income tax on the excess, but a man living by public favor, as an actor does, can't be too careful of public opinion. If we were to shower the old man with riches to that extent people might think he was high-hatting a very sacred thing, a proud ideal and boast of the nation—the $7.70 standard of living.

• • • •

The puzzled actor, at his rate of pay, might give away as much as $25,000 to a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals and deduct that amount from his taxable income. If we were to assume personally the support of 100 destitute children unrelated to him or give $1,000 to some cold and starving family of strangers, that money would be taxable. Charity to animals through an incorporated society is pure and legal, but individual succor to needy human beings, however tragic their case, comes under the heading of folly except in the case of statesmen's relatives on the public payroll.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Jackpot.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 24.—Any trip through Florida today should be entitled "Through the Slot Machine Area With Pen, Camera and Loose Change" . . . This State is the center of the Lever Pulling World . . . And the Miami area is the undisputed capital of the Kingdom of Illusory Jackpots.

• • • •

You have to see it to believe it . . . literally thousands of slot machines barricading the entrance to drug stores, grocery markets, barber shops, restaurants, night clubs, beauty parlors, fruit stands, hotel lobbies, pumping stations and bathing casinos . . . They're the first thing you see at the Miami railroad station when you pull in and the last thing you see when you pull out . . . "The battery of slot machines that meets all trains!"

• • • •

You can tell a man who has been in town long by a peculiar twitching of his right arm and a tendency to jump at anything resembling a clatter of loose coins on a metallic base . . . It's a kind of fever . . . We absent-mindedly tried to put a quarter in a taxicab meter last night . . . And the other day we discovered a tourist in a phone booth squawking because he couldn't get the jackpot!

• • • •

Many States have barred the quarter machine and even the most hardened cities of the country have imposed some restrictions, but Florida not only nurses the slot machine racket but gives it perpetual care.

• • • •

And the curious thing about it is the popularity of slot machines despite the fact that they are all geared to pay less than any similar machines in the country . . . Capt. Kidd and the James Boys would have blushed!

• • • •

New York, Chicago and other centers of worldliness have never dreamed of giving the slot machine the sweep it enjoys in Florida cities . . . There are drug stores and soda parlors with so many machines barricading the entrances that a man who has dropped in merely for a liver pill, a corn plaster or a strawberry soda is regarded as an intruder.

• • • •

It's incredible . . . Here is a country with one of the finest climates on earth, marvelous natural beauties, etc., and yet if you ask the first-time visitor what impressed him most he will tell you "Those darn slot machines" . . . The city and State authorities are content to encourge the delusion that Ponce de Leon was a gimmick salesman, that the Flaglers were primarily interested in the circulation of quarters and that the finest fruit Florida ever turns out are the three blue plums that give you back $5 for your two bits.

BOOKS

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

'The Winter Is Past'

By Paul H. Oehser

Editor, U. S. National Museum.

THE Harvard University Press has brought out, much to its credit, a book called "October Farm," made up of selections from the journals and diaries of the eminent New England ornithologist, William Brewster (1851-1919), and edited by his friend, the late Rev. Smith Owen Dexter, of Concord, Mass. It is a book that will find a place in the library of many a discerning nature lover and student.

It was a welcome relief to the present reviewer, who started "October Farm" on stormy Inauguration Day, to find it so much a book of the earth, yet so little of man's world. In it the wild creatures of the woods and waters and fields and air have their day unstintingly through the eyes of William Brewster, and very keen eyes they must have been.

In the introduction Brewster's friend, Daniel Chester French, the sculptor, tells us that "October Farm" was the name of the woodland tract on the Concord River that Brewster bought in 1891. He added to it from time to time, fixed up the old farmhouse and spent a great deal of his time there studying the wild life. It was in the country that had been the stamping ground of another great American naturalist, Henry David Thoreau, so it is no wonder that the flavor of this book is Thoreauesque, with a wholehearted attitude toward and a generous conception of nature.

* * * *

IT takes something of an inborn magnanimity to record, as Brewster does, the sad consequences of the bluejay's plundering of other birds' nests over two successive seasons and another page to set down, as nearly as could be, the thrill of finding a bluejay on her nest and being able to reach up and touch "her tail with my fingers." There is a lesson in the workings of the balance of nature in these selections from Brewster's journals, covering a span of nearly 50 years, that would be hard to find elsewhere so effectively instilled—and a lesson, too, in the relative importance of things.

Who is to say, for instance, that the fox has not as much right to the grouse, or the hawk to the unwary robin, as the hunter who kills these "vermin" for sport or to protect their victims? Or who is to say that a star's greater than a violet? As Emerson once and for all has said:

"There is no great and no small
To the Soul that maketh all."

Also there is a lesson in conservation, for the reader regretfully compares the former abundance of wild life, in Brewster's early days, with its scarcity today, when many species are really in danger of extinction.

* * * *

THE book takes the form of a chronological series of "thumbnail" nature essays. Most of them are on birds—the love song of the woodcock, the song of the brown thrasher, a flock of tame crows, a red-eyed vireo's nest; over 60 species of birds are written of (not merely mentioned), as well as numerous mammals and reptiles, even wasps and spiders and mosquitoes, and one crustacean—the fairy shrimp. In addition, and perhaps best of all, there are sketches on more general topics—the beauty of the woods, snow-laden trees, fire at Davis' Hill, evening walk, life along the river, an avian romance—which show up to advantage the simple and often poetic style of writing that was Brewster's happy gift. Here one is tempted to quote from his little essay on "Smoke":

"There was but one attractive feature connected with this deplorable fire, and that was the smoke, which had a rich, resinous, almost fruity aroma more pleasing to the nostrils than the choicest incense. It seemed the epitome of a century's growth, the fragrance of the hundred or more summers that have passed since these giant trees were young—gathered season after season, from the south wind, from the breath of the white azalea and clethra that grow in the neighboring swamp, from the white water lilies that float on the river, from the myriad wild flowers that deck the adjacent fields and woods, and stored carefully away by provident nature in the deep mat of fallen leaves, to be at length released by the subtle agency of fire and disseminated to the four quarters of the earth."

* * * *

AND one even ventures the opinion that there is something here that even Thoreau did not attain in his two more pretentious poems on the same elusory subject—"Smoke" and "Smoke in Winter." Even for one who never knew Brewster it is easy, from a reading of these passages, to sense the truth of Dan French's characterization of him—"a certain simplicity and unworldliness, an unspoiled quality that is rare in one as much a part of the world as he was, but also a certain sincerity and rightness of soul that were evident to all who knew him." His epitaph, too, is a fitting tribute to this simplicity—"Lo! the winter is past, the rains are over and gone; the time of the singing of the birds is come."

Indeed, the singing of the birds is the varied theme of these extracts from his journals, which a devoted friend has so adequately made available to us.

Legends Of The Pacific

"THE BLOOD OF THE SHARK," by Beatrice Ayer Patton. (Paradise of the Pacific Press, $2.50.)

The author of this "Novel of Old Hawaii" is well known here, for her husband, Lieut. Col. George S. Patton, jr., was stationed at Fort Myer and was also master of the Cobbler Hunt. They went from here to the Honolulu station and it is there that this new book of Mrs. Patton's has been brought out. An older one, "Legendes Hawaiiennes" was published in French in 1932.

Beatrice Patton has not depended solely on the past two years to furnish her with data and background for this book, however, as Col. Patton was stationed there before, and I am told that she spent several years in intensive study before writing it. The atmosphere of the book is vouched for by Dr. Peter H. Buck, himself a Polynesian and director of the Bishop Museum of Honolulu.

It has not been proved to anyone's satisfaction that historical novels serve any real purpose, because the reader does not know where to draw the line between fact and fiction. And yet, one is forced to admit that historical information served in this interesting form is likely to appeal to more palates than it would as a straight history which, too often, takes the form of statistical data.

Although the book is properly oriented, the feeling of a world apart is very properly preserved, and a Hawaiian world at that. An interesting factual background is cleverly woven into the narrative. The language is simple and truly forceful, either in describing the battle at Nuuanu, the cholera epidemic, marriage and birth rites, or living conditions.

There is unfortunately a sense of tragic foreboding throughout the book, although certainly the author has not intended this. It overshadows constantly the present happiness which she intends to portray. Perhaps the knowledge of the fate of the Polynesian race instinctively colors any story of the past.

The history of the Pacific islands is well preserved out there, but we here know all too little of it, mostly only gleanings from travel books which must be, necessarily superficial. For this reason, the book serves a definite and worthy purpose, and it is very absorbing withal.

The Biography of a Great River

Feluccas, Picturesque Egyptian Craft. Scene Along The Nile.

By Theodore Hall.

Herr Emil Ludwig's appetite for work is second to no man's. More, it appears to be ragingly on the ascendent. No longer will the mere biographies of a Napoleon or a Goethe content him—he must now devour 6,000 years of history, traverse 4,000 miles of river and adjacent country, and range his eye from the great pyramid of Cheopsto, the shoe-bill bird which has the happy faculty of turning its head in a complete circle of 360 degrees. This feat of Herr Ludwig's exceeds that of the bird.

"The Nile: The Life-Story of a River," is such a book as would please the keeper of a lighthouse to the hilt. It is big, leisurely, discursive, allusive, and not to be read except with patience. Yet for the reader who will leap lightly over the pages of color, color, and more color—"from out the carmine convolvulus that muffles up the mimosa the turquoise-blue kingfisher peers motionless"—and for him who will forge through these heavy, vile, Teutonic sentences, there opens up a panorama of very great interest. The Nile country from Victoria Nyanza to the Mediterranean, the Nile history from the oldest pharaohs to the sluice-keepers on Aswan Dam, these are subjects wide enough to hold any of us.

Before we come to the great architecture of the book, which for all its six or seven dimensional embrace is well planned, let us linger over the items which will please that most amiable of readers, the "snapper-up of unconsidered trifles."

Surely he will be interested to hear that the coat-of-arms of John Speke, the discoverer of the source of the Nile, bears a crocodile and a hippopotamus. (He might have been interested to hear what Herr Ludwig does not mention, that Speke survived all the perils of exploration in Darkest Africa to die at last by an accidental shot from his own gun while partridge hunting at home.)

And such a reader will note that two elephants were once swept onto an island below Mongolia, which they and their subsequent progeny of two have eaten flat but have not dared to leave in 16 years now. That in the upper Nile country it is to be observed that the tribes highest in culture are cannibals, and that only the well-built tribes go naked. That the headwaters of the Nile hold both the shortest people on earth, the pygmies of the Ruwenzori Range, and the tallest, the Dinka, among whom a man of 6 feet 3 inches is merely middle-sized. That Abyssinia has the worst thunderstorms on earth, averaging 400 a year. That after 1,350 years of exact records of the Nile floods, and with all the instruments of present science, no one has ever predicted correctly the height of any given flood. That the Blue Nile in flood is 17 per cent solid matter. (An oyster is not more than 12 per cent solid.) That a Fung king in Upper Nubia once built a palace of 33 rooms for his 33 wives, had 365 goats and a proper amount of beer brought in, and retired in peace for the year—his only contact with the world being his chancellor, who came in for half an hour each day. That the Battle of Omdurman, the "last romantic battle of history," with cavalry charges and sword fights and individual duels, took place only 16 years before the World War. That the voices of the Berbers at the Fifth Cataract have grown so strong through use that they can talk to each other across the roar of the waters when a white man would not be heard ten paces off. That the last 770 years of floods have raised Egypt three feet. That when Thutmosis I visited the Euphrates he could not believe his eyes at seeing a river flowing south. That at the Academy of Alexandria, under the Romans, were invented the first automatic slot machine (you put in a coin and out came a sacrificial offering), the first automobile, the first steam engine, the first guns, and short-hand. Herr Ludwig's book would be good ground for our Mr. Ripley.

But of course these are not times to which Herr Ludwig would have us give much attention. Far more dear to him is his image of the Nile as a man. "Now the tropics are conquered, the adventures of youth overcome, a river flows in manly gravity toward its fate." There is a deal more of that, though at the dam at Sennar this parable of Man has changed to that of a horse, and somehow its sweet sententiousness becomes oppressive and unnecessary. I can only repeat the words of Mrs. Malaprop: "Headstrong as an allegory on the banks of the Nile."

Herr Ludwig's chief delight, and one which the reader heartily shares, is his acuteness in drawing parallels between the fanatics and tyrants of Nile history and certain unnamed counterparts of our own day. Just hear him hurl his words! Of the rich Negro on the Upper Nile—"He turns solitary, suspicious and malicious, brooding in revenge, greed and dread of murder, exactly like a luckless white dictator, only that he coins no phrases and keeps no priests and professors to prove how patriotic are his aims. And like most dictators, the chief, who can have no other culture than the slave, is pre-eminent only in the art of speech." The rise of the fanatic Mahdi, the slayer of Gordon, is related as a recognizable facsimile of certain contemporaries, as witness: "The Mahdi's next care was ceremonies and uniforms, the real instruments of a popular movement among savages, white and black." Of Ramses II: "He would hardly be Ramses the Great today if it were not for this highly imaginative publicity (temples which were "the greatest examples of self-idolization known to ancient history") which, as a modern dictator has betrayed, lies in the perpetual repetition of one's own name."

Even the Nile moonfish, which puffs itself up with wind, is compared with a dictator, and the pharaoh Amenhotep II, who presumably was the one who dealt so lucklessly with Moses and the Hebrews, "Was an utter sadist whose personal features show how closely he resembled a dictator of our day." The slap indirect is no less clear when Herr Ludwig, after mentioning that the Abyssinians realize the mingling of races in their country and call it Habesh, "the mixture," goes on to remark: "Every state in Europe might bear the name Habesh."

Still, these are rather obvious lessons to draw from 6,000 years of history. More pointed, because less hackneyed, are Herr Ludwig's observations upon the results of education upon primitive peoples. In the three instances of the Negroes of Uganda, the natives of the Sudan, and the "fellahin" (12 out of 14 of the population) in Egypt, there may be seen the fact in process or imminent accomplishment that the white man passes his industrial techniques and appetites on to them solely to make them independent of him. Herr Ludwig exhibits this with a great show of evidence, and finds no disagreement with the verdict of Lord Lugard, the last great Anglo-African: "For two or three generations we can show the Negro what we are: then we shall be asked to go away. Then we shall have to leave the land to those it belongs to, with the feeling that they have better business friends in us than in other white men."

Over such a book as this the historian will growl at its looseness and impressionism, the stylist will fume at its heavy-footed pace, and the Nazi will boil with embarrassment. The rest of us, I'm sure, will find a good week's reading.

For the benefit of the correspondent who wrote and asked me more about that adverse review of "Gone With the Wind," here are a few quotes . . . "Well, while in face of all this it takes some hardihood to say so, to the present reviewer 'Gone With the Wind' is a tiresome and an irritatingly long-winded novel . . . For myself, however, I have found 'Gone With the Wind' heavy traveling, not only by reason of the author's ponderous style, but because never for once did she convey to me the illusion of reality" . . . Well, of course, every man has a right to his opinion . . . But where this New England reviewer slipped up was in saying that Miss Mitchell took her title from James Clarence Mangan's poem called "Gone in the Wind," which begins, "Solomon! Where is thy throne? It is gone in the wind" . . . The lady from Atlanta actually got it from one line in a poem by Ernest Dowson: "I have forgot much, Cynara! Gone with the wind" . . .

Deprived of their newspapers or a novel, reading addicts will fall back on cookery books, on the literature that is wrapped round bottles of patent medicine, on those instructions for keeping the contents crisp which are printed on the outside of boxes of breakfast cereals" . . . One of the spookiest short short stories I've ever seen is in "The Haunted Omnibus," edited by Alexander Laing . . . It goes:

Two gentlemen, strangers to each other, chanced at the end of a winter's afternoon to be wandering farther and farther down the darkening corridors of an ancient picture gallery. One of them, shivering slightly, said, "Rather spooky, isn't it?"

"Do you believe in ghosts?" countered the second.

"No," said the first speaker. "Do you?"

"Yes," said the other—and vanished.

Mrs. Alger

"MANHATTAN SOLO," by Marjorie Worthington, (Knopf, $2.)

This is the second book that Marjorie Worthington has opened with a funeral. Perhaps she figures with Eugene O'Neill that mourning becomes heroines. At any rate, Mary Dobbs never would have known her own strength if her husband, Peter, hadn't died, leaving her to take care of herself and their young daughter. And this book never would have taken on the success-story lines that it does if Mary hadn't taken such exquisite care—of her own hair and nails and ensemble. For Mary took Vogue seriously and, in her way, could have given Marjorie Hillis quite a few pointers.

Mary Dobbs lived alone and for some 200 pages she couldn't decide whether she liked it or not. Visions of sugar plums danced through her head just often enough to make her wonder if she wasn't a fool for choosing a career. But she kept bravely on, through countless canned suppers and numerous hurried breakfasts. Finally, in the best Alger fashion, she made good in a big way on a woman's magazine. Then old debbil sex caught up with her and she began to wonder what was the use of wearing the most becoming hats in New York City if there was no man around to admire them. So she married Clifford Gordon whom she figured must have a heart of gold because he was above thinking of things like his finger nails. Clifford didn't wisecrack and he didn't read the New Yorker and seemed to be so different from the men she knew. Mary didn't find out until too late that he was silent because he had nothing to say and that he didn't read the New Yorker because he'd never heard of it.

"Manhattan Solo" is really a good book though you wouldn't think so from this review. The main trouble with it is that it reads like a case history out of Marjorie Hillis, by Havelock Ellis. Women will eat it up; I did. But it's the sort of writing that makes men wonder what women see in that sort of thing.

Its author is the wife of William Seabrook. Yet the tenor of the book rather suggests Ursula Parrott married to a statistician.

The Grown-Ups

"THE GROWN-UPS," by Catherine Whitcomb. (Random House, $2.50.)

Essentially, "The Grown-ups" is a novel about the effect of divorce on children, but it is far too universal in its implications to be considered only as propaganda. To a considerable extent it is the story of every child, and no adult can read it without nostalgic stirrings. In it the adult world is seen chiefly from the viewpoint of a bewildered child. Camilla's efforts at adjusting herself to life are complicated by divorces and marriages. She has far more to bear than a child in more conventional surroundings. Yet she finally emerges, a clear-eyed young woman, freed at last from the hampering control of others—those grown-ups whose selfishness and ineptitudes have betrayed her inexperience.

It is a moving book written warmly, spiritedly and with great vitality. Its impressionistic style has a poetic flavor. The author has departed from the single viewpoint in well considered instances to round out her picture of the grown-ups and to explain some of the happenings that puzzle Camilla. Miss Whitcomb is sympathetic and understanding when she is dealing with children. She is compassionate in her treatment of the frustration and shortcomings of the adults.

The scene is laid in the eastern part of the United States, but the exact locale is vague. All told, Camilla's father had three wives and her mother had three husbands. At first she lived in her mother's somewhat complicated household with a brother and a sister. Fay, the sister, was the daughter of the first husband; Camilla of the second. Clair, the brother, is as lovely a small boy as one can hope to meet, either in life or fiction.

The other characters are presented more briefly, but so incisively as to achieve vitality. Camilla's charming, foolish father is a little shadowy. His second wife, Lucia, seems obviously "mad," as his mother told him, and his third wife a little colorless.

"The Grown-ups" will be read with pleasure by discriminating readers. It is at once a statement of the children's case against the world in general and divorce in particular, and an able and enjoyable work of fiction.

"A Terrible Beauty"

By Liam Lenihan.

"FIGHT fair, is it!" stormed Fluther Good in O'Casey's immortal "Plough and the Stars" when a British soldier spat out his disgust with rebel tactics. "England has landed 100,000 horse, foot and artillery," he jeered, "and yet you want us to come out in the open and fight fair." The Easter Rebellion of 1916 and the subsequent guerrilla warfare that brought a mighty Empire to her knees and comparative freedom to Ireland after more than 700 years of peonage is now history. But the story of that struggle still lives. It will be told in the years to come as night falls, by the glow of peaceful Irish hearths. It will be entwined with the rich folklore of the land and the epic sagas of earlier struggles. And, like the deeds of Cuchulain and the Red Branch Knights, it will attain heroic proportions in the minds of a people gifted with a flaring imagination that would light the very stars.

The Easter Rebellion prevented Ernie O'Malley, the author of this autobiography, from following his chosen profession. He was a medical student when the standard of revolt was raised by the Citizens Army over Dublin. He, like many others, had no feeling for or against the rebels. But he watched them fight for six days—six glorious days that turned life's water to wine. And something stirred within him, a sense of communion with the fighting dead generations and the well-remembered names of Irish patriots.

THE Rising was crushed but it accomplished its purpose. One by one the leaders were led out into the gray-walled yard of Kilmainham Gaol to face English bullets. Pearse and Macdonagh and Clarke were the first. Pearse was a dreamer and poet. He believed violence the only way out to save the nation from apathy. And he had written, "Ireland will not find Christ's peace until she has taken Christ's sword. What peace she has known these latter days has been the devil's peace, peace with sin, peace with dishonor. It is a foul thing, dear only to men of foul breeds."

And as day followed day heavy-lidden, almost every day with its tale of brave men shot down by English bullets, the temper of the people changed. The blood of a martyr is fiery red. It does not dampen a nation's spirit, it inflames it. Overnight Ireland regained her national pride. The poet Yeats chanted of the glorious transformation, "A terrible beauty is born."

O'Malley joined the Volunteers. He was sent to the west; to the south. And by the turf fires of a thousand homes he talked of the impending struggle with the young men who drifted in. He questioned them, enrolled them as volunteers, accustomed them to the sight and use of arms. His was a dangerous mission. The police were daily growing more suspicious. There were clashes with them, shots in the dark, hairbreadth escapes and weary nights spent in rain-drenched hills.

But the organization he helped to form grew. Country lads were slowly welded into an efficient fighting force. It was hard work, though. The attachment for home was strong and many thought volunteering a lark—until they faced actual combat and looked down upon the cold, still face of some neighbor's lad stretched out in the reddening grass.

* * * *

SHORT of guns and ammunition, the Irish Republican Army as the Volunteers were now called, planned, directed and carried out assaults on outlining police barracks. O'Malley fought in as well as directed many of these attacks and he soon became one of the important key men much "wanted" by the British. Faced with the breakdown of the civil administration, England resorted to repressive measures. Thousands of troops poured into the country. The police force was buttressed by the "Black and Tans," recruited mainly from the penitentiaries of Great Britain. Martial law was declared. The war was now on in deadly earnest and England's campaign of terror, murder and reprisal was launched.

The struggle reached its intensive stage in the winter of 1920. Bit by bit the I. R. A. cleared out the police and soldiers in the smaller towns. Bit by bit the morale of England's fighting forces weakened. More and more the Irish "flying columns" became active. They carried the war into England. Imperialist newspapers were "shocked." Even the Intelligence files of the Castle were not sacred. They were brought out for Sinn Fein Intelligence to read and note, and were then quickly brought back. In the face of stern warnings from Gen. Macready that the army could not stay in Ireland another winter, England hoisted the white flag and made overtures to the Irish leaders.

* * * *

ERNIE O'MALLEY'S book is more than the war memoirs of one man whose amazing adventures are comparable to Lawrence's daring in the desert. It is a history of the time and the struggle. He paints intimate portraits of the leaders involved. And to its telling he brings an objectivity, unsullied by bitterness.

Here is Dark Rosaleen in revolt against centuries of misrule. Here are peasant lads turned heroes and dying for an ideal. And here is Ireland's Gethsemane—the blacked and scarred cities where hoarse whispers gain weight with the crackle of rifle fire, the countryside where the ploughshare is deserted and the thud of alien gun butts resound at night on farm doors.

As a backdrop you have that other Ireland—the Ireland of the hills and the heather. For O'Malley is a nature lover as well as a soldier. And in this book he paints sketches of that Ireland skilfully. The turf fires, the smell of peat, the thickening of the hazy plum-skin dusk, the rattle of an ass cart in the distance, are blended into the telling with all the magic touch of the old storyteller.

"A Number of Things"

"ANNA BECKER," by Max White. (Stackpole Sons, $2.50.)

Dull people, in the grip of those prime forces which give this business of living its pain and its stature, achieve a quality and a distinction which make for interest. In this, Max White's first published novel, the dull people are gripped by nothing more intense than a mediocre plot, tediously developed, and vitiated by overwriting to the extent of possibly half the novel's length.

This is the story of Anna Becker, perennial school girl, who is blasted from her comfortable vacuum of middle class and academic convention by the primitive force of one Steve Larsen, day laborer. Unfortunately, the whole novel badly misses fire, and what no doubt was intended as an indictment of middle class convention as opposed to more primitive forces, emerges as simply another first novel, and a tedious one at that.

Anna, who enjoys the respect of the townpeople, and the reassurance of quiet mediocrity, as a tea shop proprietress in her New England college town, becomes the local scandal when she "falls from grace" in the amorous siege conducted by the rough hewn Cassanova. This along with Anna's physical and spiritual awakening, constitutes a "drama of transfiguration," according to the publisher's blurb.

This reviewer, however, cannot escape the feeling that Steve's amorous siege of the "unawakened" Anna is more comic than dramatic. Anna's awakening commences in early autumn on page 66 and is accomplished several hundred pages later, in the following April.

Steve Larsen, whose role is that of the primitive man, before whom stuffy convention is nothing, emerges as a singularly dull fellow beside whom convention, stuffy or otherwise, would be eminently preferable. His strength is a matter of conjecture, but his silence is not a matter for doubt. It arose apparently from a conversational inability to commit himself to anything more complex than "I ain't goin' to hurt ya baby." His strong-willed singularity of purpose, which is looked upon admiringly by Anna and the author, is the type which manifests itself, to say the least, in a "one-track mind."

Even a reviewer whose patience has been worn should not be averse to giving credit where it is due. It may be said for the author that he has a style of peculiar and disarming simplicity. It reads like a conscientious translation.

TOM McCARTHY.

"THE CROQUET PLAYER," by H. G. Wells. (Viking Press, $1.25).

It is a neat trick that H. G. Wells has turned in a little book which he calls "The Croquet Player." This provocative tale is heralded as a mystery-story, and indeed it is one, with all of the devices that suspend the breath during the course of the usual "thriller's" unfolding. Cainsmarsh is the setting for this mystery, but the more we see of Cainsmarsh, the more clearly we recognize it as the world in which we live, seen through the diminishing lens of Mr. Wells' binoculars. The chilling and killing presence that prevades the moorland is the same sense of impending evil that is scaring us all to death when we let our minds build and magnify the fears that beset us on all sides.

And the croquet player, himself, is the common man, the plain citizen—H. G Wells, if you will—each one of us, to be quite specific. With his tongue in his cheek and with a good-humor that shrinks not from laughing at himself, he analyzes us all, showing us our weak spots in no uncertain terms, and proving once for all what fools we mortals be.

A reviewer must not tell a story. Suffice it to say that this is a good one. Better still is the sound commonsense that lies back of its approach to and analysis of the problems that confront us today. In the last paragraph Mr. Wells says, "The world may be going to pieces. The Stone-Age may be returning. All the same I am going to play croquet with my aunt at half past twelve today." Perhaps he has hit upon the same solution of our woes.

"The Croquet Player" is a good book and an amusing one. Its author shares with many of his countrymen a happy faculty for strong connotative values. Cainsmarsh is so rightly the haunt of a brooding horror, and Frobisher, so aptly the croquet player. This is just the book to read aloud to a little group of bored or worried friends or to have at hand on the bedside-table. It provokes sensible questions and breeds pleasant dreams as answers. As to H. G. Wells, more power to him, when he can toss off so lightly a little story whose very slightness becomes, by contrast, the measure of its depth.

Barkeep Offers 'El Presidente' In a New Guise

Use of 'Falernum' Provides An Improvement on Cocktail.

By Chanticleer.

Bartender Louis Meyer has his chest 'way out this week. The Carlton minologist has produced an improved El Presidente cocktail. His boast is that it is the best rum drink obtainable, not excepting the West Indies. The reason for this definite cocksureness is that Louis has on hand now that choice ingredient known as falernum containing an illusive something necessary for a superior Cuban or Jamaican drink.

The formula for falernum is a deep-dyed secret, but it contains white maple sirup and extract of almonds. A bit of this with a bit of lime juice and a bit more of Barbados rum does the trick.

What's the most requested number by dancers these evenings? Maestro Arthur Warren at the Wardman Park's Metronone Room says in his weeks in Washington the honors are very definitely and easily Hoagy Carmichael's "Star Dust." Incidentally, Warren's arrangement of Gershwin's "I Got Plenty of Nothin'" from "Porgy and Bess" makes it an outstanding favorite.

Johnny Shaw and his Versatile Sextet are the musical treat at the Madrillon these evenings, where a dollar dinner, under the superior direction of Host Peter Borris, is meeting the customers' approval. Dancing from 7, with that able gentleman of the drumstick, Al Spieldock, on hand to increase your feeling of reckless abandon.

Judy Ellington is back in town, but for only a week. Judy has been places in the last few weeks and a bright future is ahead. For the week only she is on view at Cocoanut Grove. Singing her little Carolina head off. She's been in New York with Russ Morgan and his orchestra and down in Miami at the Royal Palm Club. Next week she joins Clyde McCoy and his Sugar Blues orchestra.

The solo was the thing at the Troika last night. Mischa Markoff, guitar-strumming basso; Capt. Nick Hope, international accordianist; Zinaida Nicolina, lovely soprano—all had a field day (or night). Hope took three encores and Zinaida Nicolina was permitted to leave only after she had done an English version of "Kiss Me Again."

Maj. Naylor, singing those catchy little ditties with Little Sam Robbins and his orchestra at the Raleigh Pall Mall Room, is reported in the publicity precincts at that popular hostelry, as being a graduate of Oberton College in Ohio. (Which I assume to be Oberlin—or am I wrong?) Anyway, Marji studied there—to become a bit of a classical singer. Then she discovered the gold in the popular tune hills. She has green eyes. Glover and LaMae, tango and rhumba experts, on view nightly on the floor.

Jimmy Byrd, big boss at the Mayfair, has relented and from now on the Cafe of All Nations will be open until 2 a. m. From now on, since he has given in to numerous requests, the place is yours after midnight. Table dancing will be acceptable, if that is the way your humor goes.

Al Sakol augumented his orchestra to ten men and swung out over the airways from the La Paree last Sunday night in a revival of the "Sky Ride" idea—from WJSV. On the La Paree's floor this week, "Broadway on Parade" has been held over with an entirely new routine of dances, songs and music.

The original swing music came from Hawaii, believe it or not. At least that is the contention of the Ambassador Hi-Hat's Royal Hawaiians. And they are all primed to prove it to you, if you'll drop in and put up your arguments. They play a little ditty entitled "TahuWahu-Wai." That usually convinces the skeptic.

Irene and Martha (no relation of the Washingtons) are appearing at the Shoreham this week—platinum blonde with natural curly hair. And blue eyes for one; hazel eyes for the other. Oh, yes, they're a sister dancing act that would make the high-stepping Hessians feel ashamed. Avila and Nile, Spanish dancers, also on the bill this week, do a Continental this week in honor of the large number of Army officers around the ringside—sort of a Continental Army tie-up, it would seem.

Tourist Camps Jump 400 P. C. in Maryland

Baltimore, Feb. 23 (AP).—The State Health Department reported today that the number of tourist and recreational camps in the State had increased 400 per cent in the 10 years since they were first licensed.

The number approved last year was 204. When the law requiring inspection and licensing was enacted in 1926, about 100 applied for permission to operate, but only 48 were found to have the required equipment and sanitary conditions.

Irene and Martha, a bona fide sister dance team, demonstrate what is meant by "high stepping" at the Shoreham this week. Also on hand, Avila and Nile, Spanish dancers.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Nikolai Berezovski, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb) in the chamber music auditorium Tuesday afternoon. Program: Quartet in F, Op. 18, No. 1 (Beethoven), Adagio and Fugue in C minor, K 546 (Mozart), Quartet No. 9 (Darius Milhaud).

In this third concert of the current series, the Coolidge foursome chose for the opening of the program Beethoven's first quartet, the unpretentious forerunner of the great works that were to follow in the four-voiced form. In it his prentice hand showed no uncertainty of grasp as he took up the quartet at the point where Haydn and Mozart had left it; at his touch a new balance and symmetry of parts appeared, and a fresh vitality was manifest.

The spontaneity of the writing and the tranquillity of the moods, even in the earnest adagio and the sprightly sherzo, reveal the confidence with which Beethoven started on his task of composing the six quartets of Opus 18. There are no accents of anxiety in the music, for the troublous times had not yet come, and no forebodings beset him. It is the speech of a master conscious of growing power and fully aware of his creative strength.

If one takes Koechel's catalogue with any chronological assurance, Mozart wrote the C minor adagio and fugue about the same time that he was engaged with his three great symphonies. Perhaps he poured into it some of the spiritual disquiet which he excluded from the symphonies, for it is a grave work and one that disturbs the listener. Here the lineaments of Mozart are far other than those of the conventional portrait; gone is the smile and absent is the radiance of a sunny nature. The music speaks of pain and even of anger at the unkindness of circumstance.

Darius Milhaud's ninth quartet is so obviously programmatic that it might well have been titled "Four Novelettes." One has to guess at the stories he is telling, yet stories they certainly are. The melodies are not mere themes chosen for weaving into designs, but narrative phrases, and the genial moods suggest the invention of fairy tales for the young. There is a decided folk quality in the music, but of an urban folk apt in repartee with a spice of malice.

Howard University School of Music presents Hazel Harrison, pianist, in recital Tuesday evening in Rankin Memorial Chapel. Program: Concerto and Fugue in C minor (Bach-Petri), "In Thee Is Joy" and "Now Rejoice, Dear Christians" (Bach-Busoni), Fantasia in F minor and Scherzo in B flat minor (Chopin), "Confessional Song" (Beethoven-Liszt), "Die Forelle" (Schubert-Liszt), "Jeux d'Eau" and Toccata (Ravel), Six Etudes after Paganini-Liszt (Busoni.)

A program so consistently virtuosic as this and so dominated by transcriptions and arrangements is seldom encountered these days in the pianistic field. The mere demands upon muscular energy were heavy and the strain upon fingers and wrists exacting, yet Hazel Harrison finished the taxing list with less evidence of weariness than one would have expected. As a feat of sustained bravura playing it deserved the enthusiastic applause which the audience expended.

With so much emphasis placed upon brilliancy, fleetness and technical expertise, it was natural that the subtleties of tonal nuance were neglected. Miss Harrison has a singing tone at her command when she chooses to employ it, and it appeared in passages of the Chopin fantasia, but for the most part it was overleaped in the swiftness of execution. It would be interesting to hear her in a more lyric program and one more fraught with poesy, for there were glimpses of interpretative possibilities in the midst of the scintillance.

In essaying all six Liszt's transcriptions of Paganini in the version made more difficult by Ferruccio Busoni, Miss Harrison gave proof of an unusual endurance. She performed them with unflagging zest and with no relaxation of tempi. Moreover, she added for good measure the Schultz-Evler arabesques on the "Blue Danube" waltz.

Hospital Staff Plans Dinner For Dr. Taylor

Testimonial for New Head of Visiting Bureau Slated Monday.

Honoring Dr. Lewis Harvie Taylor, newly elected president of the visiting staff of Sibley Hospital, members of the staff will give a testimonial dinner Monday at the Mayflower Hotel at 8 p. m.

Nationally known as a surgeon and as the author of numerous books and papers on surgery, Dr. Taylor was born near Richmond, Va., July 26, 1875. He received his early education in the public schools of the District and later was graduated from what is now the George Washington University School of Medicine.

At George Washington Hospital.

After serving as an interne at St. Elizabeths Hospital, Dr. Taylor became resident physician in 1904 at George Washington Hospital.

For two years he was assistant professor of surgery and later he became associate professor of surgery in the medical school. Since 1911 he has been attending surgeon at George Washington and Casualty hospitals.

Dr. Taylor is past president of the University Club, a member of Lebanon Lodge, No. 7, Masons, and of the Scottish Rite. He belongs to Almas Temple.

Notables Expected.

Expected at the dinner are John Oliver La Gorce, vice president of the National Geographic Society; Dr. William Gerry Morgan, past president of the American Medical Association; Dr. Walter Andrew Bloedorn, acting dean of George Washington Medical School; Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University; Rear Admiral P. S. Rossiter, surgeon general of the Navy; Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeth Hospital; Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran, United States Public Health Service; Dr. Arthur C. Christie, president of the board of trustees of American University; Hugh D. Miser, president of the local board of directors for Sibley Hospital.

Epidemic Is Worse.

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 23.—The situation confronting officials of Bellevue, the county home, where an influenza outbreak developed last week, was further complicated today when the matron and cook became ill with the malady, bringing the total sick there to 40. There are also two cases of pneumonia at the institution.

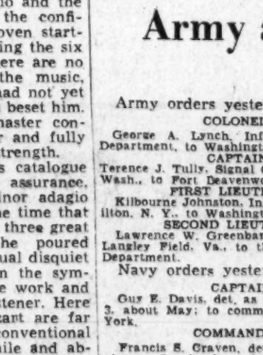
Culbertson on Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Today's hand illustrates one of the most unusual rescue situations that I have seen in a long while. It is difficult to think of a five no-trump bid as a rescue bid, but that is what it was on this occasion. Moreover, under the circumstances, it was a shrewd stroke!

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 N T	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	Pass	5 N T	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding requires considerable explaining. North was anything but a good player, and South was an expert. South, on hearing his partner's opening bid, had slam visions; but, considering his singleton, he controlled his enthusiasm while attempting to establish a "fit." When North's second bid came in the heart suit, South's doubleton, South virtually abandoned his slam hope and contented himself with a jump to three notrump. The fact that North then jumped to five spades impressed South very little—North was by nature a jumper and quite undependable. Rather than reach a higher contract on a misfit hand, South retired, but West's penalty double brought him back to the fray. He knew that the hand would probably be difficult to handle and was certain that North would not be able to cope with it. His own play at five notrump more than justified his rescue.

West opened the five of hearts, dummy played low, and East's Jack went to the King. Declarer investigated the diamond situation by laying down the Ace, but when West showed out he saw there was little hope in that quarter. The eight of hearts was next led, and West, rather than establish dummy's Queen and ten, merely covered with the nine-spot, the ten winning. Dummy's other diamond was led; East split his honors, and declarer won with the King. West, meanwhile, had had to discard on the two rounds of diamonds; on the first he had let go a heart and on the second, a low club. Dummy was now entered with a spade, and after cashing the King of clubs declarer playing two more rounds of spades, then threw West on lead with the fourth spade and West was helpless. He cashed the heart Ace, but after that, since the heart continuation would present dummy with its heart Queen and good spade, he could only lead a club, and this gave the declarer three additional club tricks for his contract.

Capt. E. J. Trumble Burial Is Saturday

Funeral services for Capt. Edward J. Trumble, commanding the Marine detachment aboard the U. S. S. Wyoming, who was killed by a gun explosion during war games off the Pacific Coast, will be held in Alexandria Saturday at 9:30 a. m. at St. Mary's Church.

Burial will be at 11 a. m. in Arlington Cemetery, with full military honors. Pallbearers have not been announced. Trumble's body will reach Washington Friday morning. Maj. Robert L. Montague, of the First Marine Brigade of the Fleet Marine Force, is escorting it across the continent. Although regularly stationed at Quantico, Va., Montague was temporarily on the West Coast with other members of the Fleet Marine Force participating in the war games.

Army of Soviet Warned to Gird For War Threat

Japan, Germany Openly Menace the Reds, Commissar Says.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Feb. 23.—The 1,300,000-man Red army and the Soviet people were warned tonight to prepare for the "war threat" of Japan and Germany as the army's nineteenth anniversary was celebrated throughout Russia.

"The two countries which most threaten peace—Nazi Germany and imperial Japan—have made no secret of their plans to attack the Soviet Union and seize its territory," the leading newspapers of Russia proclaimed.

"It would be foolish to imagine that Fascism and reaction have given up their plans of attack."

The same thought was echoed in thousands of speeches made to the army and in the anniversary order of War Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff, who urged the military forces to remember the enemies of peace "are viciously sharpening their swords."

Factory workers commemorated the anniversary by announcing they are spending all spare time studying military tactics and preparing to convert themselves into wartime fighters for the Soviet Union.

In Kuibyshev province, 450 tractor-combine operators on a collective farm said they were learning tank operation. In Moscow, 9,000 workers in one factory were said to be ready to serve as sharp-shooters for Voroshiloff, and the entire factory personnel was studying military training courses.

Nazi Austrians Riot.

Vienna, Feb. 23 (AP).—Baron Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister, left for Berlin tonight, and his departure was a fitting conclusion for the two tense days he had spent in the Austrian capital.

Several persons were slightly injured in street clashes between Nazis and members of the Fatherland Front, the Government Party, as crowds thronged the streets.

Thirty were reported arrested as Nazis attempting to demonstrate clashed with thousands of police and Fatherland Front members. In side streets near the station mounted police belabored Nazis.

Vote Delay Asked.

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—Mounting opposition to Adolf Hitler's avowed plan to let German Protestantism choose its own controlling body threatened today to delay elections tentatively set for April 11 by Church Minister Hans Kerrl.

The voting has been ordered by Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler to put evengelical church affairs back into the hands of the Church electorate.

Two reasons for further delay in the elections were cited by religious leaders:

1. The fundamentalist confessional synod seems determined to boycott the election altogether on the grounds it cannot accept orders from Hitler.

2. The Lutheran state churches of Bavaria and Wurttemberg are inclined to agree to participate in the election only if Herr Kerrl first submits election rules and regulations to them for approval.

Reich Workers Warned.

Berlin, Feb. 23 (AP).—Marshal Werner von Blomberg, Germany's minister of defense, tonight gave the workers of the Reich four commandments: Loyalty, discipline, faith and "keep your mouths shut."

Marshal von Blomberg asserted the World War situation in which soldiers won battles while labor leaders "committed high treason at home with impunity" and "misguided" workers laid down their tools must never recur.

If war ever comes again it will not be of Germany's seeking, said the marshal at the consecration of Labor Front banners of war ministry employes, "but peace doesn't depend on ourselves alone."

League Session Asked.

Geneva, Feb. 23 (AP).—A special assembly of the League of Nations for election of Egypt as a sovereign, independent nation was urged tonight. The assembly would be held in May.

Turkish representatives, alluding to the great past of the land of the Nile, told the League Egypt, "now a young, valorous and independent nation," should occupy the place which belongs to her in the family of nations.

Lorton Superintendent Urges First Offenders' Segregation

Reiterating his recommendations of sweeping changes in the District's handling of convicted felons, Col. William L. Peak, superintendent of Lorton Reformatory, yesterday emphasized the need of an institution for first offenders and urged the expansion of existing rehabilitation facilities at the prison.

Agricultural and industrial activities at Lorton should be developed further, both for the purposes of providing work for idle hands and increasing production for the benefit of other District institutions, Col. Peak said.

He also advocated an adequate educational program, which would include a stenographic course especially for first offenders.

"Careful safekeeping of offenders is merely a stopgap if those same men are going to commit new offenses after release," the superintendent asserted. "The important function of Norton is to direct as many men as possible from social liabilities to social assets."

At present there is a $1,800 appropriation for an educational instructor, but the position has been vacant since last July because the figure is too small to attract acceptable applicants.

Col. Peak also cited the need of a social worker, full time and well trained, and a psychologist. Appropriations for those two positions would make possible the creation of a rehabilitation committee, he said, which would aid materially in adjusting the prisoner to his institutional environment and upon his release to social conditions outside.

About 400, or more than one-fourth, of the prisoners at Lorton, are first offenders, of whom 250 could safely have been placed on probation instead of being sent to the "reformatory" to mingle with hardened criminals, Col. Peak declared.

He urged more extensive use of the probation system, with particular reference to minors who are being arrested and sentenced for the first time.

Members of the corrections committee of the Council of Social Agencies will be guests of Elwood Street, director of public welfare, and Col. Peak tomorrow at Lorton.

Rayburn Urges Preservation Of Constitution

Defends Administration's Policy At Reunion of W. & L. Alumni.

Calling himself "a reactionary caught in the talons of the New Deal," Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, majority leader of the House, last night declared the Constitution must be kept a living, useful thing. He asked the audience to give the Administration credit for trying to preserve it. He spoke at the annual reunion of the District Chapter of Washington and Lee University Alumni held at the Cosmos Club.

Though the Constitution has not been changed. The Government of the country, he said, always will be "of, by and for the people."

Rayburn was introduced by Edward Campbell, president of the District Chapter and toastmaster. Rayburn began his talk with references to the greatness of the two men for whom the university is named.

The group, which meets as close as possible to the anniversary of the birth of Gen. Lee, also was addressed by Robert H. Tucker, dean of the university.

Burns Prove Fatal To Retired Worker

Annie Brown, 77-year-old retired Government worker, died at Casualty Hospital yesterday from burns received Monday night when her clothing caught fire in her home, 17 N street northwest.

Her clothing was set aflame by a match she dropped attempting to light the gas. Dropping to the floor, the match ignited papers and old dresses she was keeping to remind her of her youth.

She tried to save the things she loved so dearly, but the flames had too great a foothold. Calvin O'Donnell, 30, who lives next door, rushed into the house and smothered the flames.

pital for the Insane, said he could not fit the activities of the slayer into a recognized pattern of insanity.

On September 23, 1935, two headless bodies were found on Jackass Hill, not far from Kingsbury Run. Both were nude, as were the others. One was identified as Edward Andrassy, 28. The other was never identified.

In January, 1936, a barking dog aroused neighbors in a district not far from Kingsbury Run. Police found in a nearby vacant lot two bushel baskets containing the torso and left arm of another woman. All of the missing parts, except the head, were found later in another vacant lot not far away. The victim was identified through fingerprints as Mrs. Florence Polilla, 41, who once had been arrested in a vice raid.

On the following June 5, two boys playing hookey from school, found an old coat rolled up into a ball in a gully off Kingsbury Run. Inside they found the head of a youth of 20 or 25 years. The next day the body and clothing were found about 300 feet away.

On July 22, 1936, a man's body was found in a ravine near the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks on the West Side. The head had been severed and lay nearby. The man was never identified.

The body of the seventh victim, a man, was found near a culvert in Kingsbury Run, September 10, 1936. The head never was found and identity was not established.

U. S. Funds Asked To Teach Adults

New Orleans, Feb. 23 (AP).—More than 300 leaders of adult education resolved today to ask Congress at this session to appropriate Federal funds to be disbursed by the States for teaching adults.

Discussion of the proposal was led by Miss Maude Aiton, of Washington, president of the adult education division of the National Education Association, now in session here.

The contemplated program would provide for literacy classes for persons above 16 years of age and below fourth grade level and classes in citizenship for persons falling in the same classification.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Asks How Blameless Friendship May Be Achieved With Man Who Can't Obtain Divorce.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some months ago I met a man to whom I was deeply attracted and who was equally attracted to me. After continued effort on his part he finally gained a formal introduction and we then discovered our feeling for each other was mutual. But this man is married. However, he has not been living with his wife for some time or I would not have entered into friendship with him. He desires divorce and has grounds to obtain it, but lack of money has caused him to postpone action. Also, he is under military as well as civil law.

• • • •

The tongues of gossip are quick to pick up such a situation, and in order to protect my reputation we are forced to act as utter strangers. Of course, we could probably meet secretly, but our relationship is entirely wholesome and we prefer to wait a better solution than acting under cover. Both of us are very unhappy under the circumstances, and surely there is some solution which will prevent both our lives being wrecked. I feel sure you can give competent advice, and I shall appreciate an early reply. Sincerely yours, DOLORES.

• • • •

DEAR DOLORES: There is no magic or mysterious side road or short cut to happiness under such circumstances. Since you have wisely decided to avoid being made the object of gossip, your friendship with this man must remain at a standstill until he has obtained his divorce. If he is as deeply interested as you believe and sincerely desirous of protecting your good name he will get his divorce if he has to procure a loan to do so. Until he is legally free to court you, the only seemly arrangement for seeing him is under the chaperonage of mutual friends.

• • • •

If he has married friends who know him to be the injured party in his late marriage and who sympathize with his need of and desire for congenial feminine companionship, he might introduce you to these couples and go out with you in their company occasionally. Modern society makes sensible allowance, within reasonable and well chaperoned limits, for the companionship needs of husbands and wives who have decided to go their separate ways but who have not, for good causes, yet obtained a complete divorce. M. H.

Girl Needs Job.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Will you please try to help me? I realize this isn't in your line but I know of no one else to go to. My father has told me that he can no longer provide for all of us, therefore it is necessary to me to find work. I have tried to find it in the village where I live but there just seems to be no opening here.

• • • •

I am a young girl and can do housework but I cannot cook. I am fond of children. I have never had a job before. It doesn't matter what kind of a job it is so I can make enough to support myself. I am giving my name and address so that if anyone is interested they may obtain it from you. I will appreciate any help. Thank you. KITTY.

• • • •

DEAR KITTY: The only possible way I can help you is to publish your letter and trust it may come to the attention of some housewife who is in need of a mother's helper and who may be willing to take an untrained girl for small salary, room and board and train her in the technique of efficient housekeeping and child nursing. If any inquiries should be forthcoming, I shall be glad to give your name and address. M. H.

Farm Wife Wants Piano.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wonder if any of your column readers know what it is to be hungry, body and soul, to play the piano? I studied music a number of years ago, before I was married, but for 15 years I have had no piano. Every year we have thought we would be able to buy one and every year something has come up to absorb our small margin of cash. We live on a farm and I have been happy otherwise, although we have never had more than the necessities of life, but the desire to pour out my joys and sorrows in piano music is sometimes almost more than I can bear. Not that I am a musical genius, by any means.

• • • •

I have a little girl 13 years of age who is musically inclined also and she is growing every day and will soon be gone from me and I would so much enjoy teaching her what music I can. I though, probably if you would print my letter, Miss Haworth, that surely now the radio has taken the place of other musical instruments in so many city homes, someone in Washington who has an unused upright in good condition would be willing to give it away to someone who will give it the most appreciative care. I wouldn't care how scarred or scratched it might be, just so it plays.

• • • •

If it should be on the ground floor I could get my brother to call for and deliver it to me, as he does city trucking. I am leaving my address for you, Miss Haworth, with a heart full of hope. Sincerely,

HOPEFUL.

DEAR HOPEFUL: I can't answer for my readers, but I can say for myself that I too, have sometimes felt that inexpressible yearning to declare moods throught the responsive medium of a piano keyboard. But it is lack of piano-playing technique more than absence of piano that has left those moods of mine forever undeclared. I would that I had made more of my piano lessons in youth! But the elusive position of something which, as I remember, was called Middle C dampened my enthusiasm for piano playing at a most impressionable age, and now that I have lived to appreciate what I missed by failing to embrace opportunity when it knocked, I never seem to find time to recapture that lost ground I let slip so heedlessly under my feet.

• • • •

I hope that some kind reader will provide the answer to your prayer and that within a very short time you may have the companionship, comfort and inspiration of a tuneful piano all your own. It would give me great pleasure to act as go-between in such a transfer. M. H.

In Step With Spring in Navy Blue

Navy blue kidskin fashions the unusually smart sandals above designed by Schiaparelli. The sleek vamps, which curve high over the instep are decorated with shining gypsy seams. The companion handbag of the same material and color as the shoes is distinctive in shape and convenient in size.

Buckles and Intricate Styling Feature Spring Shoe Models

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

INTERPRETING her enthusiasm for the beautiful slim feet of American women, Schiaparelli on her recent visit to this country designed a number of pairs of shoes to add to her outstanding dress and suit creations. With her remarkable flair for detail these smart models, fashioned of kidskin, are veritable works of art. They were presented at a special showing in New York last week, on living models.

Besides the smartly complicated cut of the shoes, I noted that the majority of the models were adorned with miniature buckles, either plain or jewel-trimmed. Both dark and bright colors were displayed—in monotone and color contrast—for daytime and evening.

Speaking of shoes in general, they are appearing in the spring collections cut higher than those of last season, to complement the new short skirt lengths. Straps abound, simple and intricate of manipulation; open areas, especially the porthole types of perforations are much in evidence. Toeless sandals, so popular in the evening styling, have been designed for daytime wear—this does not mean sports shoes only, but for afternoon as well. Dark ground prints are suggested for wear with white and pastels for summer. The peasant influence is noted in styling, materials and color; for instance, shoes made of sackcloth and those of multi-colored buckskin or doeskin.

Ankle Straps Are Higher.

Oxford ties and pumps are cut higher, giving a graceful effect to the ankle. On shoes equipped with ankle straps, both the tunnel-like affairs an dthose of the new "boot strap" inspiration, the straps are noticeably higher. The bandage type of ankle strap, which is wider, usually extends as high as the ankle. Cut-out sides are being exploited in shoes of both the afternoon and spectator sports styles; tongueless oxfords and U-throated affairs are other spring features. Panels and vamp decoration (rows of narrow straps, piping and the like), are among the features of the new shoe stylings.

Kidskin, gabardine, patent leather, combinations of gaberdine and patent, buck, doeskin, calf and dress fabrics, are the materials used in fashioning shoes for spring and summer. The leading colors are black, navy, gray, warm tones of brown (of which there are numerous hues), slate blue, carnelian, red earth, green yellow, beige, and, of course, all-white and white with tan or brown for summer. Monotone models, those of two tones, and multi-colored versions, are all fashion-correct; the main consideration is to be careful about combining shoe and costume colors.

Spring Shoe Primer

Multicolors accompany all-white summer frocks.

Two-tones are considered chic for evening.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Ills That Affect Eyes.

THE AGE from 20 to 40 may bring failing vision for reasons peculiar to that particular age. One of these is a developmental disorder due to nutritional disturbance, which may come from a diet poor in fat substance. Almost never seen in the United States and Canada, due to the high standard of nutrition, a peculiar condition of softening out the outer surface of the eye is quite prevalent in Russia where fasts, either voluntary or inevitable, are apt to be long. Cod liver oil is almost a specific in the treatment.

Although it usually appears early, a condition of clouding of the cornea, known as "interstitial keratis" may make its appearance around the age of 20. It is due to an inherited disease, and is usually accompanied by cretain other signs, such a deformity of the teeth, scars at the angles of the mouth, catarrhal deafness and high, arched palate. It is subject to successful treatment.

Danger of Infection.

Next on the list of dangers to the eye in this age period are those which arise from focal infection. A focus of infection localized in the teeth, tonsils, the middle ear, sinuses of the nose, or the gastro-intestinal tract, may send its poisons into the system and light upon the eye. Especially likely to be involved is the iris, or diaphragm, of the eye, which controls the size of the pupil, but the surface of the eye, the cornea, may also be involved, as may the pigmented portion of the back of the eye, the choroid.

Systemic Disorder.

In this age period, too, systemic disorders are likely to make their appearance, and since the eye is part of the entire system of the body, it may bear the brunt of attack from a disease of the respiratory, heart, kidney or digestive systems. For that reason, your oculist frequently insists upon a complete examination by the family doctor before he is willing to undertake treatment.

Diabetes, a frequent disease of this age period, can affect the eye in many ways in practically any part of its structure, and treatment of the eye itself, without combined treatment of the underlying condition, is futile.

A drug habit, such as alcohol or tobacco, also may bring disturbances in its train, climaxing at this time.

Tasty Salmon Recipes Vary Diet for Lent

By Rebekah Blake.

Salmon is a versatile food. And when you use the canned form, it is so convenient and easily prepared for the table that you want to use it often. It has so many preparations that it is never monotonous. And it is cheap, too. With salmon you can have a different meal every day during Lent at a minimum cost.

The Washington Post readers submitted a large number of salmon recipes for the contest last week. There were many recipes for souffles, loves, salads, and salmon cakes but few duplicates in the lot.

Mrs. E. L. Frances of 2440 Sixteenth street northwest, won first prize, $3, for her recipe for Salmon Grille.

The second prize, $2, went to Mrs. E. Davis, Sligo avenue, Silver Spring, Md., for her recipe for Friday Special, the third prize, $1, was awarded to Mrs. Emma Panzlan, Flint Mich., for her recipe for Salmon Baked with asparagus and the fourth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Alvin Pierson, of Leesburg, Va., for her recipe for Noodle Salmon Casserole. Salmon Box was the recipe submitted by Mrs. A. D. Herren, 4112 Gualt place northeast, which won the fifth prize, also $1.

Here is Mrs. Frances's recipe:

Salmon Grille.

Spread 1 pound cooked, drained spinach in a buttered baking dish. Drain 1 can of salmon and arrange it in big pieces on top of the spinach. Cover with mushroom sauce and some slices of bacon. Sprinkle with grated cheese, white bread crumbs and small pieces of butter. Brown in a hot oven for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve in the same dish garnished with lemon slices and sprigs of parsley.

Mrs. Davis' recipe:

Friday Special.

1 cup salmon
12 bread cubes (2 inches square)
1 cup grated cheese
2 eggs
2 tablespoons milk
Salt and pepper to taste

Cut the bread into 2-inch squares and make a hole in one side of each. Fill with the salmon, which has been flaked and boned. Dip cubes in a mixture of the cheese, eggs, milk and seasonings. Place on baking sheet, place a little more cheese over the top and bake in a hot oven for 15 minutes or until brown. Serves six. A strip of pimiento or sprig of parsley makes an attractive addition to each serving.

Mrs. Panzlan's recipe follows:

Salmon Baked with Asparagus.

1 can asparagus
1 tablespoon butter
Salt and pepper
1 pound can salmon (red or pink)
1 cup evaporated milk

Drain asparagus and heat in butter. Season with salt and pepper. Put asparagus in buttered glass pie plates, add flaked salmon and cover with milk. Bake in a moderate oven, 375 F. until nicely browned. Garnish with quarters of lemon and fresh tomatoes.

Mrs. Pierson's recipe:

Noodle-Salmon Casserole.

4 tablespoons margarine or butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups milk
2 cups noodles, cooked
1 package pimiento cheese, shredded
1 small can salmon, boned and flaked
1 cup mushrooms
3 hard-cooked eggs, sliced

Melt the margarine or butter in a saucepan, stir in the flour and the seasoning. Add the milk gradually, stirring constantly to prevent lumping. Bring to the boiling point, let cook three minutes. Arrange noodles, pimiento cheese, salmon, mushrooms and eggs in layers in a casserole which has been well greased. Pour sauce over all. Bake in a slow oven (325 F.) until done (about 30 minutes). Remove from oven and serve immediately. Serves 6 to 8.

Here is Mrs. Herren's recipe:

Salmon Box.

Take warm, steamed rice and line a slightly buttered bread pan and fill the center with cold boiled salmon, flaked and seasoned with pepper, salt and a pinch of nutmeg. Cover with rice and steam for one hour. Serve on hot platter in a ring of yellow sauce.

Yellow Sauce.

1 cup confectioners' sugar
2 eggs
3 tablespoons wine or
2-3 teaspoon vanilla

Beat the egg yolks well and add gradually half of the sugar. To the stiffly beaten whites add the remainder of the sugar. Combine both mixtures and add wine.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 23.

OUR GREATEST dog show has come and gone, leaving all sorts of interesting canine matters in its yelping wake. Funny how obsessed this rocky city is with pooches, since it has always seemed to me almost a form of sadism to keep a hound in a twentieth floor apartment, with no place to run and jump but on the new bedspread. And don't they, just!

ALICE HUGHES.

I myself am constantly in touch with the dogs of Murray Hill, as famous for its canines as Greenwich Village is for its thousands of slinking cats. I don't own one, nor do I know many socially, but my pet enemy. Old Faithful, howls in my back courtyard for hours on end—longing, no doubt, for fields and hills and running brooks, while I pray quietly for his release from these canyons or for his peaceful and happy demise.

The mighty Westminster Kennel Club show at the Garden this year was an enormous success. Several interesting things transpired. First, there was the novel thief who picked up a champion flea-hound, or one of those tiny breeds, stuffed it in his coat pocket and quietly walked away. Then the Irish Setter Championship changed hands, with a beauty named Knightscroft Patty Boyne getting the judges' nod over Ch. Milson O'Boy, no less than 85 times judged best-of-breed in various shows.

• • • •

And there was the ever-pretty sight of Betty Compton Walker, wife of our former Mayor Jimmy, who showed her handsome Irish terrier, Selmish Sweetheart. And the new gadgets for the blue-blooded dogs—my good gosh! There's something called "Bow-Wow Bon-Bons" (on my word of honor!), a dextrose caramel for the little dears! And you should see the hand-knitted jackets and transparent silk raincoats! This doggery constantly astonishes me. And as I end this paragraph, the mournful wail of Old Faithful rises again!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—We may not have any Dionnes, but darn it, we have got our Kasper Quadruplets, fat and sassy at nine months! They've just left the hospital for home, each weighing nearly 20 pounds, and all full of fun. Three boys and one girl, and one of the lads, Felix, is one of the cutest, most comical looking young-uns I've ever eyed . . .

• • • •

Good news from Georgette Cohan, daughter of our beloved George M. and of his divorced wife, Ethel Levey. Georgette, who's been very ill at Doctors' Hospital here for months, is on the mend . . .

Dear Alexander Woollcott, the essayist and radio orator, has now actually sold his East River apartment to dear Noel Coward, and Noel has startled the neighbors by turning the kitchen into the bedroom. It seems the old bedroom was right on the noisy street, which jangled the Neolian nerves no end. Meanwhile, Alec has taken Hope Williams' place in smart Gracie Square, since Hope, once a promising young stage star, has gone to rusticate on her Wyoming ranch.

• • • •

We've sadly said good-by to lovely little Carol Stone, who's been playing in "White Horse Inn" since its opening four months ago. Carol has turned her role over to Ann Barrie and has gone home to Hollywood to visit her wonderful old daddy, Fred, who has been sick in the hospital these many weeks. But I hear Fred is doing well, and will soon face the camera again.

Proper Care of Pets

FRIENDLY cats and dogs! They amuse us, and lavish devotion, even when people fail us. And what a source of pride they can be if they're well fed and well trained.

Right food is all-important if you'd keep your cat sleek and playful. Two-thirds of his diet should be meat—mostly raw beef, occasionally cooked lamb, chicken or fish, or raw liver. The other third should be non-starchy vegetables like spinach, carrots and string beans.

Learn to treat your cat's winter colds promptly, too. At the first signs of watery eyes, hot nose, clogged nostrils, drop 10 per cent argyrol into nostrils twice a day.

No matter what kind of dog yours is, you can teach him a few tricks, guided by tips from a famous trainer of dogs for the movies. At 9 months is the best time to start training. Before that your pet is too busy teething and exploring the world.

He'll learn more quickly if he's not confused during training by different tones of voice, gestures and expressions. So let only one person teach him, beginning with simple commands like—"Come here!" "Lie down!" "Speak!" "Hush!" Later he'll advance to "Pick it up and bring it to me!" and "Stand up and walk to me!" After he's learned his lessons well, some one else may put him through his paces.

Our 40-page booklet, "Facts About Pets," gives full instructions for training dogs. Complete directions for the care of cats, canaries and tropical fish, too.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Facts About Pets," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Eggs Are Featured In Recipe Contest For Post Readers

EGG DISHES play such an important part in meals, especially during the Lenten season. They are used as meat substitutes, but are cheaper than most meat dishes. This week's recipe contest is for good suggestions for egg dishes.

If you have a favorite recipe for an egg dish, enter it in The Post recipe contest. You may win one of the cash prizes.

The awards for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

There are so many attractive recipes to choose your favorite one from. You may like to serve egg ring with creamed mushrooms, stuffed egg salad, eggs baked in green peppers of French omelet. Or you may like cheese omelet, baked hash with eggs, egg chowder or eggs with chicken livers.

Type or neatly write your recipe and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, in time for it to reach her by Saturday noon. Be sure to copy your name and address on your recipe.

Juices of Stewed Fruit Prove Tea Party Treat

Whenever prune, apricot or peach juice is left over from stewing a kettle of dried fruit, you have an excellent opportunity to treat the children to a tea party. These juices contain the same minerals and vitamins which make the fruits so important from the nutrition standpoint, and so you are treating the youngsters to health, as well as a good time.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

GOOD TASTE in the selection of wedding gifts is particularly important now that marriage license statistics show weddings on the increase. Many letters addressed to this department relate to this problem. The following letter is from the sister of a man who is to be married in a Western State:

"Dear Miss Wallace: May I leave the price tags on the lingerie wedding gifts I intend to send the girl my brother will marry? I have never seen this girl and have no idea what size she wears. She is wealthy and will have an elaborate trousseau. I want to leave the price marks on so she can exchange the really expensive articles I have seluected for her if they are not the right size.

"My father and mother and sister have selected things for the new home rather than wearing apparel for the bride. My mother has advised against my sending this girl wearing apparel, as she is to have an elaborate trousseau, but I feel I want to make her gift a personal one, as I am very fond of my brother and feel that this will please him. Do you think it is proper for me to send the lingerie together with a little note saying she can exchange it if it is not the right size or color?" "J. L."

Wrong Selection.

Under the circumstances it would not be good taste to send the bride wearing apparel. Only her intimate friends do this, and even they are moer apt to give the bride a less personal gift, like something for her room or her dressing table. It would be very difficult for a sister who had never met the girl her brother is to marry to select wearing apparel that would be to the bride's taste, even if it were good form to try. If the sister wishes to present her brother's bride with something personal, she could send her a writing cabinet, something for her dressing table or simflar article. It is very bad taste to leave price tags on a gift.

A prospective bride writes as follows:

"There are four men and four girls in the office in which I work. I am to be married and htey have decided to give me a joint gift at a luncheon the office staff is giving in honor of my fiance and myself. One of the girls has informed me they are going to select lingerie and asked me to say if I would rather have something else. I do not want to hurt their feelings, but of course I do not want to take lingerie from men even if it is a joint gift. It would embarrass me to have it presented at the luncheon. Do you think it will be courteous to tell the girls I would rather have something else, as a hand bag, silver, china, glass ware, or table linen? I would really like a good picture and the money they have collected would buy it."

It will of course be entirely proper for this young woman to say that she would prefer something else to lingerie. If questioned she could mention the picture.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WELL," Maisie said, a little defiantly, "I like it!" And her remark, occasioned by her showing us her all-white bathroom, started us to mulling and philisophizing over our peculiar desire to make things look like what they aren't—bathrooms into aquariums, kitchens into clinics and the like. We Americans seem to have a particular gift for this sort of thing, and while we do often achieve amazingly attractive results, we have to be pulled up short every so often to keep from running it all into the ground.

We considered her all-white bathroom and liked it, too. It was certainly a relief from so much color, which has been the trend in the last few years. She explained that she had had to fight tooth and nail to get her own way—her architect wanted lemon yellow, her painter lifted his eyebrows and her small son was all for everything in fire-engine red. But white she would have and white it is, and very pleasant.

The tile was all white as a starter. By having the painted add just the suggestion of blue to the white paint for the walls she eliminated a "dead" look in the room without adding too much color. The rug, a white bear-skin; the curtains, white duck with white ball fringe, white transparent rubberized silk for the shower curtain and snowy white linen and accessories.

"Of course it looks clinical," Maisie admitted, "but why not?"

Well, why not, indeed? We couldn't think of any really important reason why a bathroom shouldn't be just the most professionally sanitary looking room in the house. And when we thought of some of the sins we have seen committed in the name of bringing color into the bathroom we were rather glad that our friend had stood for her rights. But even so, we found ourself wondering how dark brown terry towels with spanking big white monograms would look in her all-white bath!

Anne Green Is Married In Maryland

Bridal Couple Leaves for Ohio After Ceremony.

Many Washingtonians were among the 100 guests last night at the marriage of Miss Anne Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Green, of Severna Park, Round Bay, Md., to Mr. Philip King, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip King of this city.

The bride wore the wedding gown in which her mother was married 25 years ago. It was of ivory satin and duchess lace, the original style unaltered. The lace formed a high neck, the full sleeves were of elbow length and the skirt fell in a long train. With it she wore a tulle veil arranged in cap effect with a chin strap and short face veil. Her bouquet was of calla lilies and green orchids.

The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Robert B. Reeves, jr., of the Severna Presbyterian Church. It was in the drawing room before the fireplace which was banked with palms and ferns.

Sister Is Maid of Honor.

Miss Frances Green, sister of the bride, served as her maid of honor. She wore a gown of powder blue moire taffeta, of bouffant style, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet. She also wore a short blue veil, caught at the crown of her head with a cluster of talisman rosebuds.

The bridesmaids were Miss Nancie Ray, of Severna Park, and Mrs. Albert Neale Smith, of Baltimore, the former in a redingote of gray chiffon over flame color, and the latter in gray chiffon over apple green. Both wore face veils of gray tulle held with clusters of yellow roses, and carried bouquets of the same flowers. Little Miss Betty Maxwell, of Severna Park, the flower girl, wore a period frock of yellow moire taffeta and carried rose petals in a lace basket.

Mr. George L. Hart, of this city, was best man and the ushers included Mr. Robert Harris Reid, of New York City, a cousin of the bridegroom; Mr. Carl Schlachter, of Montclair, N. J., Mr. John W. Haines, Dr. Marvin McDougall McLean and Mr. Lawrence Proctor, all of Washington, and Mr. Peter I. Hamilton, of Seattle.

Reception Held.

The parents of the bridal couple received with them at the reception which followed the wedding. Mrs. Green wore a black chantilly lace and Mrs. King, mother of the bridegroom, was in a gown of black chantilly lace and tulle made with a scarf coming high around the neck and falling over both shoulders to the bottom of the skirt. Both wore corsages of lavendar orchids.

Three of the bridegroom's aunts, who were here to attend the wedding, are returning to their homes today. They included Mrs. Sigmund Romberg, wife of the noted composer, who wore a sweeping chiffon dress and a corsage of camelias; Mrs. Edmund Rhodes, of New York City, who was in black taffeta with a corsage of green orchids, and Mrs. Maurice Bandler, of Deal, N. J., who wore black lace with a tulle cape, and a corsage of white orchids. Mr. Bandler was also among the guests as were the bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Henry L. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. Milton King, Mr. Sylvan King, Mr. Henry King, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Luchs and Mr. Mortimer King, all of Washington.

The bride attended William and Mary College and later the Maryland Institute of Art. The bridegroom attended Princeton University. Following the wedding reception, they left by motor for Columbus, Ohio, where they will reside.

THE MERRY WHIRL
by MARYLYN

Maria Elena Garduno, attractive sister of the Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy tells an amusing story on herself. Several years ago she and her family were in London. That was before the pretty senorita had mastered the English language. One of the first days of her stay in the British city, her family had some official calls to make and it all worked out so that Elena was to spend the noon hour alone. So—following her father's suggestion, she went into the dining room of a large and impressive hotel. She had been told that, even if she did not speak English, she had merely to point to lines of print on the menu and she would be served "something."

Into the dining room she went, selected a table and seated herself. A waiter brought two pieces of cardboard each covered with words. This did not alarm Elena, who figured that they ppobably had much food to serve that it took two menus to list it all. Taking one "menu" she tapped her long artistic finger at the end of one line, smiled and waited. The waiter bowed and hurried away—stayed away, and no food was forthcoming. Becoming a bit impatient (who wouldn't, to say nothing of the suspense) Elena summoned the head waiter and pleasantly indicated the same group of words on the paper. He, too, hurried away.

It was a disconcerting position, this of starving in the midst of plenty—the poor young lady quietly sitting at a handsomely set table, with smartly uniformed attendants hovering nearby, soft music issuing from behind a bank of palms and apparently everyone standing by heartlessly doing nothing about her dinner.

Finally a friend appeared—one who spoke English. Elena explained her predicament and how she had tried to order her meal. With that the friend went off into gales of laughter and translated the "order." A program of the luncheon music had been brought with the menu and she had been politely and firmly requesting the same song program to be played over and over again, and utterly ignoring the tempting dishes on the other list.

Bill O'Connor, young law student nephew of Jeffty O'Connor, who passed several bar exams even though not yet through his course of studies, is a very likable person. He is tall and dark and bears a striking resemblance to Robert Taylor.

Saw Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General at luncheon the other day. She was costumed in shades of rusty-rose tweed with a smart brown felt hat of beret style, and brown accessories.

Among the attractive young girls tea dancing with their beaus at the Mayflower Lounge the other afternoon were Teenie Ekengren, who wears tailored clothes so well, in a trim little brown suit with a cream cravat tied high at the neck, and Jean Ulman, a wise young person who does not let the newest and most fetching chapeau stand in the way of enjoyable dancing, but relegates the headgear to the table while there is music. She had on a frock of dark blue, with brief sleeves and high neck trimmed with peacock blue.

Abner Drury 'Home Scene Of Tea Party

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland and Others Attend Function.

By Lynda Reeve

Three sisters, Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. Margaret Kyle and Mrs. Stephen Burke, were hostesses yesterday in the former's residence on Bancroft place in honor of Mrs. Edgar Leslie and Mrs. Ralph Case.

The Drury home was decorated with early spring flowers. In the drawing room were low bowls of poinsettias, yellow daffodils, Japanese iris and rose snapdragons. In the dining room the tea table was centered with an effective arrangement of red and white carnations and blue iris, on either side of which were tall silver candlesticks with bright blue tapers.

Mrs. Drury wore a redingote gown of royal blue chiffon over emerald green crepe. Mrs. Kyle's frock of black satin was made on long princess lines and Mrs. Burke had on an ensemble of black broadcloth and ermine. Mrs. Case's gown of black tucked net was fashioned with brief puffed sleeves and on one shoulder she wore a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Leslie also chose black for her costume, which was of lace. She wore gardenias in her hair.

Mrs. Copeland Attends.

Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, who was among the early arrivals, wore a gown of black crepe beaded at the neck and sleeves with red and white, and an off-the-face hat of black felt. She and Mr. William Shearer chatted over their punch cups. Near them were Mrs. Peter Drury in black; Mrs. John McMullen, in silver lame and a small black velvet hat, and her daughter, Miss Margaret McMullen, in black with bright bouquets of flowers appliqued on the skirt and bodice, and a small turban of black ribbon designed with a butterfly bow in the front and having a short, lacy veil; Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson in gray, her frock having accents of garnet crepe and her small hat trimed with squirrel; her brother-in-law and sister Mr. and Mrs. Robert Graham, the latter in rose figured challis, and Mr. Rodney Kenner.

Miss Bette Hartz Present.

Some of those about the tea table were Miss Bette Hartz, in a bright spring print; Mr. Dwight Kendall, Miss Jane Holt, in navy blue crepe, a veil decorating her small pill-box hat of black felt; Mrs. de Berry Canada in a symphony of golden-brown; the Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Commercial Secretary of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell, the latter in brown with touches of orange on her hat and at the neck of her gown, and their daughter, Mrs. Richard Eglinton, wearing a chartreuse tunic with brown skirt and hat; Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, the latter in emerald green crepe trimmed at the neck and on the cape sleeves with gold and brilliants; Maj. and Mrs. McKenzie Davison, she in black velvet; and the Commercial Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Mr. Paulo Hasslocker.

Other guests included the former President of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, who was wearing a frock of dark blue with a beaded bodice, and a gray felt hat; the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro; Mr. and Mrs. Barge L. Hartz; Mrs. James P. McKane, wearing a suit of abbot gray tweed with a scarlet quill in her beret; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, in black, Mr. Bonaparte Johnson; Mme. Espaillet, in violet and silver lame; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Watson, Mrs. Watson in brown trimmed with mink; Mrs. Lloyd Anderson, in olive green trimmed with wide cuffs of red fox; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajigas; the First Secretary of the German Embassy, Herr Ernst Wilhelm Meyer; Mrs. Joseph Horgan in black trimmed with gold beading, and Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hill.

Fight to Alter Plea Is Lost By Farnsworth

Ex-Navy Officer Accused of Serving Japan to Hear Sentence Friday.

former Navy officer to plead not guilty, and announced that he would impose sentence on him Friday.

Farnsworth faces a sentence of from 4 to 20 years in jail.

Discharged From Navy.

Farnsworth, who was discharged from the Navy not long after he had led his squadron of seaplanes over Washington in a welcome-home demonstration for Lindbergh in 1927, was smoking a cigarette and writing a telegram to President Roosevelt when a reporter visited him late yesterday.

After reviewing the day's events in court, Farnsworth charged that the Government was afraid to try him.

"What is the case against me?" he asked. "I'll tell you what it is. It is based on a Sunday magazine thriller which I hoped to sell to a syndicate. They told me I would get at least $20,000 for it. I needed the money.

"The story was to expose the inside of the spy racket, and the highlight was to be a plot to blow up the Panama Canal. Was there such a plot? I don't know, but I imagine there was. What more stragetic point in American defenses could an enemy attack.

Qualified As Agent.

"To sell the story I had to convince the magazine people that I really was qualified as an international agent. That was easy. It was so easy that here I am in jail.

"I told them that I had been hired by the Japanese Embassy here to report on all phases of the Limitations of Arms Conference in 1933-34-35. I told them also that I had been retained to advise Japan on a new method of organizing its air force, both on land and on sea. That part of it was true. I was retained by the Japanese Embassy, but everything I did was legitimate.

"However, the syndicate people forced me to submit credentials of actual spy work before they would accept my story. I thereupon submitted a list of events which might have been carried out by me and which would bear checking, but which, actually, were fictitious.

"As I said, my work for the Japanese was entirely legitimate. Never did I give them anything that was confidential. But, of course, I didn't admit that to the newspaper syndicate people. I told them my work was highly confidential."

Feared Expose As Faker.

"I used to go up to the office of the syndicate almost every day to write my story. There were several weak spots in the story, spots that might trip me up, expose me as a faker.

"But I went around with the syndicate man to check up on my story, and luckily (or so it seemed at the time) I made it seem to hold together.

"I convinced them that I was truly a spy. And then they turned me over to the Department of Justice.

"If I had committed treason against my country, do you think I would have walked into a newspaper office and spilled the story? And do you think that if I had been a spy, with valuable information to sell, I would have been broke, trying to peddle a Sunday thriller? Do you think I would be here now, in disgrace."

Blames Imagination.

Farnsworth, no longer the snappy-looking officer he once must have been, said he had been cursed by a too lively imagination. Laughing, he recalled an occasion in the Navy when his imagination got going under full steam.

"I was chief aviation officer in the Scouting Fleet," he recalled, "and we were on our way to Cuba. One day I got a devilish idea, and I got it into the ship's press news. I wrote the story myself, all about the bubonic plague having broken out in Cuba. Boy, there was hell to pay."

He recalled, too, some other larks he indulged in.

Government Charges.

The Government, however, says that Farnsworth's imagination carried him into treasonable acts against his country. It charges that he received $20,000 from Japan, that important naval documents had a way of disappearing whenever Farnsworth dropped in on friends, that he turned over to Japan valuable information about the performance of the fleet's guns, and that, as a result of his espionage, the battle tactics of the American Navy have been revised, and likewise the confidential co ses given American naval officers.

Facing Justice Proctor in court yesterday, Farnsworth said:

"When my attorneys came to me I told them I wouldn't plead guilty if the President of the United States asked me to and I had to serve only one day in jail."

Fornsworth's attorneys, William E. Leahy and William Hughes, jr., vehemently denied that any pressure had been brought to bear on Farnsworth and said the decision to avoid trial was entirely his own. They asked and were given permission to withdraw from the case by Justice Proctor.

Referring to Leahy, Farnsworth told Justice Proctor:

"I didn't hire him. He was hired by my family to save the family name at my expense. Now I'm going to save it myself."

Farnsworth asked Justice Proctor to note an exception to his ruling against a change of plea, indicating that he intended to hire other attorneys and appeal.

District Attorney Garnett said that after Farnsworth made his plea he seemed satisfied and asked to be brought to his office.

"I told him I was willing to assume that excessive alcohol had weakened his moral fiber so that he accepted $20,000 from the Japanese government," Garnett said.

"Farnsworth replied, 'Well, that's only $5,000 a year.'

"I told him we had proof that he got 23 $100 bills in one day to cover his expenses from Ohio to Washington and he said, 'No, it was $3,000.' He left my office in perfect good humor and seemed satisfied with his plea."

Assistant District Attorney Samuel Beach told Justice Proctor that the Government's witnesses who were assembled in Washington at great expense had scattered all over the Nation.

Farnsworth told Justice Proctor that the large number of witnesses was not needed. "I could get together with the district attorney and through stipulatoin admit 80 per cent of the things that the Government claims I did," he said.

On the witness stand Leahy was asked by Justice Proctor if he had prevailed upon Farnsworth to withdraw his plea of "not guilty."

"I did not," Leahy declared. "I explained the facts and situation to him and told him it was his problem. I said I was willing to walk through the door of this courtroom and battle like hell for him if he wanted to stand trial."

Hughes said he told Farnsworth that he thought he would get a lighter sentence if he pleaded "nolo contendre" or "guilty."

Supports Lawyers.

Deputy United States Marshal Bonham, who was at Farnsworth's side while he was in conference with Hughes and Leahy at the courthouse, submitted an affidavit declaring the attorneys had never mentioned the naval officer's family or exerted pressure upon him.

Farnsworth told the court that members of his family had said the publicity resulting from a trial would interfere with the chances for promotion of a brother-in-law who is in the Navy.

Beach told the court that Farnsworth's change of plea was "a trick by which he hopes to catch the Government unprepared. He is trifling with the Government and he is trifling with the court."

Defendant and Counsel in Arlington Murder Trial

Adjutant Will Speak.

Adjt. Albert E. Baldwin, of the Salvation Army, will be the guest speaker at the men's fellowship dinner in the Arlington Presbyterian Church this evening at 6:30 o'clock.

'Honor' Caused Slayings, Says HunterCounsel

Judge McCarthy, "he (Hunter) would be confined in the hospital to this day, and probably for the rest of his life."

Other Grounds Stated.

A charge that the "short form" indictment under which Hunter is accused is unconstitutional and a Virginia statute which he said makes mandatory the discharge of a defendant if he is not brought to trial within three court terms following indictment were the other bases for Fulton's plea for dismissal.

The trial was causing something of a sensation in the nearby Virginia community and the courtroom remained packed, though Judge McCarthy held court in session until long past the dinner hour in an effort to speed the trial and free the 12 male jurymen picked earlier in the day.

Hear Neighbors' Stories.

The judge ordered the jury locked up in the custody of Sheriff Howard Fields in the tourist home of Walter E. Bell at Park Lane. But before they went to their place of temporary confinement, the jury heard a recital from Hunter's neighbors of some of the events that took place on the early spring evening when Mrs. Hunter and Corcoran died.

The first of these was Mrs. Russell O. Stancil, who was cooking dinner in her kitchen when the first shots were fired. She said she saw Mrs. Hunter and Corcoran running about the front lawn of the Hunter home. She ran to the Hunter front porch, she related, heard another shot, saw Mrs. Hunter fall, then fell herself in a faint.

Mrs. Alice H. Schaub, whose home on Sixteenth street is just 200 yards from the scene of the carnage, testified to seeing Hunter and his wife at the garage in the rear of their place. She heard two shots and saw Mrs. Hunter throw her arm across her husbands' shoulder and saw him help her into the house.

Keeps Behind Tree.

Sanford Sutton, colored, provided the courtroom with its only touch of humor. Attracted from where he had been working at a neighbor's home by the sound of gunfire, he had been a witness to the shooting by:

"Keeping a tree between me and him and yelling at him to stop shooting."

Sutton testified that he saw Hunter shoot himself and, in repley to a question, declared that he believed the defendant was then a madman.

County Policeman Raymond Cobean, who found the bodies of Mrs. Hunter and Corcoran lying on the porch with Hunter lying across his dead wife, and Dr. W. C. Welburn, who testified his examination of the bodies indicated death had been instantaneous, were the other witnesses.

At 6 p. m. the prosecution rested its case. Judge McCarthy adjourned court until 9 a. m. today.

Sales of Jewsharps In GermanyTwang To Discordant Halt

By the United Press.

Daniel C. Roper's Commerce Department lifted an eyebrow last night and announced that the jewsharp trade in Germany has twanged to a discordant halt.

It used to be, the department said, that jewsharps were shipped to Germany in large quantities. Here lately nary a jewsharp has crossed the Rhine.

The department wouldn't say why this musical crisis had developed, nor how, nor whether any mystery surrounded it.

Tennessee House Votes Ban on Child Marriage

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 23 (AP).—The Tennessee House of Representatives passed a bill, 91 to 0, today to prohibit child marriage, such as the recent union in remote Hancock County of a 9-year-old girl and a 22-year-old mountaineer.

The bill, fixing 16 as the minimum age for marriage, now goes to the Senate which previously had adopted another proposal setting 14 as the minimum.

Edward Takes Holiday In Old Mountain Castle

Noetsch, Austria, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor found relief from the boredom of exile today—deep in the Karawanken Mountains, which all but smother this obscure south Austrian village.

On an unheralded visit to his friends, the Count and Countess Paul Muenster, Edward poked about old Muenster Castle, which some say, he would like to buy for Wallis Simpson, and played golf by the shimmering Woerthersee.

Nurse Leaves $16,000 To Her Former Wards

Philadelphia, Feb. 23 (AP).—Miss Mary Fairbanks, a nurse for the children of Mr. and Mrs. William Draper Lewis, left her $18,000 estate principally to her former charges, under her will filed for probate today. Miss Fairbanks was a member of the Lewis household for 40 years.

Lewis is a director of the American Law Institute and former dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Loyal Miners Blast Path to Oviedo Citadel

Loyalist Artillery Crushes Rebel Defenses in Three Places.

Vista district, heavily fortified by the insurgents, was captured by militiamen, said the Gijon dispatches.

Reports were heard in the Oviedo Sector that insurgent Gen. Jose Varela had been seriously wounded on the Madrid front, but there was no confirmation.

(Dinamiteros again went into action, reports reaching Madrid said, after several insurgent sorties had been repulsed by the besiegers. The fiercest fight raged for possession of the Oviedo market building and surrounding district where the insurgents held strongly fortified parapets.)

Insurgents broadcasts from Oviedo proclaimed the garrison "invincible," calling the garrison's heroic resistance a "second Alcazar," and drawing a parallel to the 72-day siege of the Toledo Alcazar which was relieved by insurgents September 27.

Valencia Bombed.

Madrid, Feb. 23 (AP).—Black-winged planes of Gen. Francisco Franco's rebel air raiders roared over Valencia twice today, striking terror as they showered bombs along the waterfront section—first rebel attack on Spain's temporary capital.

Sleepy citizens, awakened by alarm sirens as the invaders droned out of the morning sky, scurried to places of safety. A woman and a young boy were killed before government pursuit planes drove off the rebels.

Anti-aircraft batteries added to the din that shocked the sleeping city into activity. The dark rebel raiders swooped low over the poorly defended port area, shattering shops as they sent 12 bombs into streets filled with frightened residents, who ran out at the first alarm.

Esperantists

One of our readers telephoned to say that Dr. Frederick G. G. Cottrell, latest recipient of the Washington engineering medal, is among other things, an outstanding Esperantist—which seems a good enough peg on which to hang a little story of how the international language is faring among Government workers.

There is a local Esperanto Club, headed by Ernest G. Dodge of Civil Service, that meets Tuesday nights for study at the Thomson School. The club also sponsors a class for beginners on Friday nights in the pages' school room in the Capitol, with Gerald F. Small, of Navy, as instructor.

Esperanto is easy to learn—Small assured us even the Federal diaryist could learn to master the tongue in three to five months. The vocabulary to be memorized consists of only about 2,000 root words, there are no irregular verbs, and only 16 rules of grammar. Esperantists like to say that the whole grammar can be written on a postal card. Maybe it's because Esperanto is usually put forward as the tongue which, if universally adopted, will help heal national rivalries, but Esperantists invariably are enthusiasts, as if imbued with the zeal of a cause.

• • • •

Most prodigious of the 18 government Esperantists we discovered, with Dodge's assistance, is Mrs. Ivy K. Reed, of Labor, who has written two Esperanto grammars and has also translated Shakespeare's "As You Like It"—the Esperanto rendition of "well done, thou good and faithful servant is "vi bone farin, bona kaj fidela servisto."

John C. McDowell of Dairy Industry, another enthusiast—his wife used to teach Esperanto—is preparing to translate some agricultural articles for an international Esperanto journal.

Other Esperanto speakers are Joel G. Winkjer, Agriculture; Kenneth F. Rogers, Postoffice; Mabel G. Hamilton, Tariff; Kathleen Prutz, Veterans; William W. Pegues and Paul Winters, War; William Patzer, Navy; Rose Matera, SEC; Frieda Thume, Interior; Virginia Ehrenberg and Robert L. Bailey, Civil Service, and Dean McLaughlin and Mrs. Billie Bullard, PWA.

Weatherman.

Engaged with the weather indoors while everyone else confronts it outdoors, Weather Forecaster E. B. Calvert, of Agriculture Department, says that more complete and timely information on North American weather has become available for marine interests and foreign meteorological services with revision of the Weather Bureau's daily broadcasting program. Information on weather conditions on this continent, formerly issued in two bulletins—the Major Marine Bulletin and the Angot Bulletin—is now combined into a more comprehensive bulletin known as the Marine-Angot. You are wondering, same as we did, just what they mean by Angot. It is in honor of a distinguished meteorologist, who nearly 50 years ago, when director of the French Meteorological Service, began by cable the first international exchange of weather data—that between France and the United States.

Speaking before the Associated General Contractors of America in annual convention at San Antonio, Harold L. Ickes said:

"Unfortunately, no business or profession is free from chiselers and corner cutters. The small percentage of undesirable citizens who are willing to accumulate money at whatever moral cost makes it difficult for the decent majority to maintain themselves without resorting to practices they despise. I am not unaware of the pressures that frequently are put upon contractors if they want to build public works. Therefore, it is all the more to your credit that we have come through this public works program with the excellent record that you have made."

You know, of course, how many elevators the new Interior Building will have, and have heard numbers of times how many cooks will stir the stew in its ultra-modern kitchen . . . so we thought you should, by all means, know that there will be 26,100 pieces of china, to be cleaned in two dishwashing machines capable of scrubbing 100 pieces per minute, each. And about the tricky machine that will polish the silver.

Postals.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, will be chief speakers at the third annual Maryland Outdoor Life Convention in Baltimore Friday. . . . The closing date for the receipt of applications for position of tree surgeon in the National Capital parks has been extended to tomorrow.

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

Even if you have to be a little bit blunt at times, I think in the end it's a whole lot better to come right out and tell a person the truth than to stall 'em off. You'd really be doin' the other person a favor and you'd save both of you a lot of time.

I've got a poetic uncle—my Uncle Gladstone Hink, who kept comin' to me with poetry that he wanted to put in this paper. Of course, I didn't want to hurt his feelings because I knew that poets are awfully sensitive and I just kept stallin' him off.

Finally the other day, he comes right out and asked me, point blank, what I thought of his poetry. I didn't want to tell him the truth, so I just told him that I hadn't time to read 'em, because his writin' was a little bad. I says, "You could make it a lot easier on me if you'd type these out."

He looked at me kinda funny and he says, "Do you think I'd be wastin' my time writin' poetry, if I could work a typewriter?"

Study Nears On Merging Of D.C. Police

Consolidation of Park Metropolitan Units Is Sponsored.

Consolidation of the Metropolitan and United States Park Police forces and possible abolition of Budget Bureau action on local legislative problems are items to be considered by the Commissioners' civic committee on District government reorganization, it was learned last night.

Seeking to promote greater efficiency of administration by a sweeping investigation of all District departments, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is completing an agenda for the proposed committee and indicated yesterday the inquiry will begin not later than March 10.

The Commissioner also invited comments and suggestions from Washington residents.

"I want to make this the best governed city in the country," Hazen said. "There is no reason why this cannot be done—but we want to know how the citizens want us to begin. They pay the bills—they are the ones to be considered."

Police Units Conflict.

To consolidate the city's two major police agencies would be in line with long-standing proposals by both District and Federal authorities. Operating as independent departments, the Metropolitan and Park police have frequently clashed over jurisdiction and enforcement.

This conflict repeatedly has been cited as a major example of reported "overlapping" in functions of numerous departments. City heads feel that law enforcement efficiency will be increased by merging these police powers.

District financial movements will be expedited through suggested elimination of the action on local Administration costs, Budget Bureau officials said. No one, however, would comment freely on the matter, pending future recommendations of the proposed citizens' committee.

Under a proposed system, yearly estimates for city needs would be sent directly to Congress rather than by way of the Budget Bureau. Thus, the problem could be threshed out in a single motion on Capitol Hill.

Representative Group.

The names of many prominent business and civic leaders are being studied by Commissioner Hazen for possible appointment to the committee.

"I want a cross-section of representative citizens to handle this matter," Hazen said. "They will be chosen for their knowledge of local affairs and ability to recommend concrete plans of action."

Representatives of the Board of Trade, Merchants and Manufacturers Association and Federation of Citizens Associations will be asked to serve on the investigating body, Hazen indicated.

A chairman for the group will be picked after the entire committee has been appointed, he said. Whoever heads the inquiry, Hazen added, must be someone "who is not very busy with his own affairs."

The committee will not begin to function until the return March 10 of Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, who is vacationing.

Bell ringing for fish. Frank T. Bell, left, commissioner of fisheries, and former Representative James V. McClintic, of Oklahoma.

Charlie Jackson Gets Brush Burns in Lake; Jennings Randolph Bats for Board of Trade At Hook, Line and Sinker Gabfest.

Trout that will bite only to the tune of "Jingle Bells" and catfish so-o-o long had their inning last night as the Hook, Line and Sinker Club, holding its first monthly meeting, got down to the serious business of telling tall ones.

With a Senator, a Representative and a former Representative contributing to the general fabrication, all went well until one initiate had the audacity to tell one which was known to be the truth. He was promptly disqualified with prejudice.

Foregathering at the Willard Hotel, the 944 charter members (Note: Actually there were about 80, but your correspondent caught the spirit of the evening), listened to well-turned yarns until some chicken-hearted neophyte in the rear yelled "Uncle!" Then the fight began.

Only the battle royal of a half-dozen Siamese killers (?), tossed into a single tank by Promoter Fred Orsinger, didn't quite jell. The S. P. C. A. may be reassured that none of the six did so much as lay a dorsal fin on another.

At press time, Orsinger, director by day of the Commerce Department Aquarium, was still trying to work up a feud among the sit-down strikers, who bore such names as Ogopupu and Prince Something-or-Other the Second.

"I reckon the water's too cold," alibied their chaperone. At the club's inaugural luncheon last month when the much ballyhooed argument between the same contestants resulted in a similar love feast, Orsinger protested that the water was too warm.

So to the yarnfest, which was somewhat more productive. Fisheries Commissioner Frank T. Bell, club president, started the ball rolling modestly with this one:

A couple of years ago he and Deputy Commissioner Charles E. Jackson were trout fishing in Alaska. One day they were lapping a drink at a mountain lake when Jackson, who had grown a long beard, was set upon by a school of trout which apparently had taken a fancy to his whiskers.

Well, and you can wring the Bell if this isn't the truth, those ornery trout towed Jackson the circumference of the lake with such speed that when they finally deposited him on shore he was full of brush burns.

Representative Jennings Randolph resisted the urge to match that one, delivering instead a Chamber of Commerce speech on the fine angling in the nearby portions of his home State of West Virginia.

He pleaded with the 1,304 confreres present that swell fishing beds lie within 90 minutes of Washington Monument (also a tall one), identifying his State as "The Switzerland of the Americas." This prompted Senator Francis T. Maloney, of Connecticut, to rise from his seat and announce that if Mary Pickford is "America's Sweetheart," then Jennings Randolph is West Virginia's.

The assemblage of 11—fishermen, though, really got their 75 cents' worth (this fee also included a sardine and oyster supper) when former Representative James V. McClintic, of Oklahoma, arose and cleared his gag-lined throat.

Keeping a straight face—the sure sign of an experienced angler—McClintic regaled his 1,700 auditors with tales of four-legged fish that nonchalantly walk the land in search of new ponds when their own dry up; tales of California streams so thick with bluegills, or something, that you couldn't get your bait below the surface.

"Why," said McClintic, beginning to get steam up, "I've seen fish leap so high that they were perspiring when they hit the water. I've—but look here."

Whereupon he drew from his pocket a glove studded with jingle bells, which he averred were capable of a siren tune which had lured scores of bass to their doom. From another pocket he pulled forth a pair of decoy fish, dry batteries in their innards, which were just the thing for nocturnal angling.

"In a single night," he said, fondling the effigies lovingly, "they brought to bay 17 bass, 2 catfish and a carp."

Citizens' Group Asks Increase In D. C. Budget

Welfare Organizations' Plea for Supplementary Fund Turned Down.

The threat of additional taxes has failed to discourage spokesmen for local civic organizations who annually ask Congressional sub-committees for appropriations over and above those recommended by the Budget Bureau.

Meanwhile at the District Building, the Commissioners denied a request for a supplementary relief appropriation of $830,000. The Budget Bureau also ruled adversely on the proposal.

The clerk of the House sub-committee on District appropriations said yesterday that the number of requests for time to present demands is greater this year than in recent years.

Pleads for Reductions.

Only one applicant has indicated a desire to plead for reductions in District appropriations. He is Rufus J. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association.

The other spokesmen, chiefly representing citizens associations, want more schools, streets, policemen, nurses, prison guards, and other items which would swell the $47,500,000 budget that is now $10,000,000 greater than revenue expectations.

With the return to Washington of Chairman Collins, the House subcommittee is scheduled to resume hearings this morning with estimates of the public library first on the program.

Long-pending requests from several local welfare agencies for the supplemental direct relief appropriation were denied by the District Commissioners and Budget Bureau.

Ask Additional Funds.

The additional funds were sought to carry direct relief activities through the current fiscal year ended June 30.

After numerous conferences with representatives of various private and public welfare groups, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen laid the matter before Budget Bureau authorities. It was promptly turned down.

In announcing the action yesterday, Hazen said the Commissioners concurred because there was little prospect of obtaining the money during this session of Congress. He advised welfare heads to submit requests for a larger appropriation for the neext fiscal year.

Bureau Gets Dry Act Bill For District

23 Measures Submitted By D.C. Commissioners for Congress.

Local Levy on Incomes Also Asked in Proposed Legislation.

A bill to return prohibition to the District was among 23 legislative measures submitted to the Budget Bureau by the Commissioners yesterday.

With confidential reports from District heads, the bills were forwarded to the bureau for transmission to Capitol Hill. Each measure, however, previously has been introduced in Congress but "died" with adjournment last year.

The Commissioners declined to comment on the pending items, refusing to say which they approved or rejected.

A throw-back from several earlier Congressional sessions, the proposed prohibition measure would abolish the "manufacture, sale, etc., of any spirituous liquors whatsoever" in the District.

Wins Dry Support.

Introduced in the House as H. R. 189 soon after repeal, this bill has long been opposed by numerous District leaders, but has found support through various local dry organizations.

And among those bills submitted to the Budget Bureau yesterday was a measure providing for the sale of alcoholic beverages at bona-fide lunch counters. This would amend the District alcoholic beverage control act and permit restaurant patrons to sit at a bar while partaking of their drinks.

Among financial items included in the legislative list were bills to provide for taxation of incomes in the District; to increase the motor vehicle fuel tax by 2 cents and to repeal the existing 60-40 statute.

Sale of D. C. Building.

Another bill provides for sale of the District Building to the Federal Government so a modern "city hall" may be erected at the proposed municipal center.

The following measures also were included in the Commissioners' list:

A bill to require the registration of motor vehicles in the District and to prescribe registration fees based upon the weight of such vehicles.

Two bills providing for reappointment to the Police Department of David R. Thompson and Ralph S. Warner.

A bill to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of certain public buildings and for other purposes." This is to permit erection of Government buildings at the southwest triangle.

A bill providing for the bottling of beer only in the place where it is manufactured.

A bill providing for erection of a building for the sole use of the Pan-American Union.

In connection with the last measure, it was pointed out that local motorists are now forced to pay Federal gasoline taxes, but the District receives no part. By receiving a share of the returns, officials said, an additional $600,000 would be available for street repairs, etc.

Trinidad Citizens Back Racing Bill

The Norton bill to legalize horse racing in the District with, a regulated track and strict enforcement of all laws, was approved last night by the Trinidad Citizens' Association, in session at the Wheatley School.

A motion to petition the Park and Planning Commission to authorize CCC members or some other agency to clear the tract at New York avenue and T street northeast and make it into a first-rate Government park was adopted.

The meeting was presided over by the president of the organization, George J. Cleary.

Dr. Homer K. Butler was unanimously elected secretary to fill the place of Morris Fox, resigned, at last night's meeting of the Southeast Citizen's Association at Hine Junior High School. A resolution was adopted, urging that the salaries of the District Commissioners be increased from $9,000 to $12,000 annually.

D. C. Boys Reach Home Safely After Struggle With Blizzard

Four Youths Stranded for 27 Hours in Broken-down Car on Lonely, Storm-swept Pennsylvania Road; Rescued by WPA Worker.

They are Charles Lawrence, 18, of 1009 K street northwest, Jimmy Lee, 16, 48 I street northwest; Ashton Couch, 16, of 1412 Chapin street northwest, and his 14-year-old brother, George.

With a companion, Vernon Mace, 16, of Cherrydale, Va., they left Fort Royal, Pa., at noon Sunday in a battered automobile of ancient vintage. Their destination was home, but 4 miles out they ran into a blizzard, and then the fun started.

"It was sorta manageable at first," young Lawrence commented yesterday. "I opened the window of the car and steered by the black safety line. Then the snowfall became thicker than a pea-soup fog and it was a case of fighting every inch to keep the car on the road."

But the tribulations of the boys had only started. They took a wrong turn, lost their bearings and then out went the lights. With that they parked the automobile, looked with sinking hearts at the gasoline gauge (it had sunk also), and counted their 78 cents that could jingle but could not buy food.

"We were without food for 27 hours," Charles said, 'but that was a minor discomfort in comparison to the cold. We took off our overcoats, wrapped them collectively around us, snuggled close together and tried to imagine we were home."

But the boys could not sleep. Outside the blizzard howled and snow and darkness blacked their view. It was then they remembered the harmonica they took along, and they found some comfort and solace in lively tunes.

A WPA worker finally stumbled upon their car, gave them directions to a nearby farmhouse, where young Lawrence called home. His father came to the rescue five hours later. The battered old automobile they abandoned.

Layton Is Jailed As Past Record Is Investigated

Promoter Pleads Guilty to Two Counts in Mail Fraud.

Pleading guilty to two counts of an indictment charging him with use of the mails to defraud, Alfred M. Layton yesterday was ordered recommitted to the District Jail by Justice James M. Proctor while the probation office delves into his past record.

Layton, arrested several years ago in connection with the promotion of the Pershing Memorial Bust Committee, was indicted on six counts of use of the mails to defraud.

Shortly after his arrest, and while he was out on a $10,000 bond, he fled the city, and was found two years later in Atlantic City, only a few days after bond had been forfeited. He has been in the District Jail since his return here.

Layton, without any previous criminal record, may be placed on probation, despite the fact that his $10,000 bond was forfeited. The charges to which he pleaded guilty involved Paul D. Cravath, New York corporation lawyer, to whom two letters of solicitation had been sent.

Layton is said to have obtained about $11,000 from mail solicitations he sent out. Maj. Gen. George Squier, who was head of the committee, died within two months of the collapse of the plan, and Moses Dykaar, sculptor of the bust, which had been personally approved by Gen. Pershing, committed suicide under the wheels of a New York subway train.

The indictment against Layton charged he had solicited many of the Nation's leading business and industrial leaders in an effort to secure subscriptions for the purchase and donation of the memorial.

Hearing Finished On Ramspeck Bill

Hearings on the Ramspeck bill to extend the civil service act to all executive departments were concluded yesterday by the House Civil Service Committee.

Chairman Ramspeck said the committee will not be called together to act on the bill until next week at the earliest. The only controversial point is whether the measure shall provide for competitive or noncompetitive examinations.

John Thomas Taylor, legislative counsel for the American Legion, was one of the last witnesses, and he made a plea that the Ramspeck provision requiring competitive examinations be left intact.

He pointed out that World War veterans will lose the preference and 10 per cent extra rating allowed them by the Civil Service Commission under a noncompetitive test.

Judge Hitt Doubts Validity of Latest Snow Parking Ban

Washington's new fool-proof snow-removal no parking regulation "bounced back" on the District commissioners yesterday when Judge Isaac R. Hitt took the personal bond of six motorists arraigned before him.

The new regulation which went into effect about two weeks ago was designed to bridge objections to the former rule raised several weeks ago by Attorney T. Edward O'Connell. Judge Edward M. Curran ruled the old regulation "unreasonable," and upheld O'Connell in his objections.

Judge Hitt, in taking the bonds of the motorists charged with violating the 2 a. m. to 8 or 9:30 a. m. parking ban, said there was some doubt in his mind concerning the validity of the latest regulation.

Judge Hitt said:

"I am taking the personal bond of all persons arraigned before me for this violation. I am doubtful whether the court of appeals would uphold the statute if the question of its constitutionality reached that body. I believe the regulation would be effective, however, if there was snow on the ground.

Auto Deaths For District Climb to 25

Hit-and-Run Motorist Strikes Pedestrian At Intersection.

Traffic fatalities in the District for 1937 soared to 25 last night when William Schweitzer, 60, of 1513 Third streets northwest, died in Gallinger Hospital of injuries suffered December 19, when he was struck by an automobile as he tried to cross the street at Truxton Circle.

This time last year deaths from mishaps in traffic were only 17.

Henry Long, 31, colored, of the 7100 block of Ninth street northwest, driver of the car, was arrested for reckless driving and released under bond at the time of the eccident. He was rearrested last night and will appear at a coroner's inquest.

Cuts and bruises were suffered yesterday by Edward Fulk, 34, of 492 F street northwest, when he was struck by a hit and run driver at Thirteenth street and New York avenue. He was taken to Casualty Hospital as police searched for the driver.

Discovery of an abandoned and damaged automobile in Alexandria yesterday led police to the belief they had found the car of the hit-and-run driver who struck and injured, critically, 11-year-old George Widmyer, of 3125 Mount Pleasant street, as he was returning from the George Washington's Birthday celebration.

Officials said paint on the bent bumper and hood of the car matched the paint on the coaster wagon in which George set out to the ceremonies. The accident apparently occurred on Constitution avenue, not far from the Monument Grounds, where George was found unconscious.

Meanwhile, the child remained unconscious in Emergency Hospital, where physicians said his skull was fractured and that he had suffered internal injuries.

Several other persons were injured in traffic crashes yesterday while a coroner's jury decided Mrs. Mary B. Tew, 90, thought to be a traffic victim, died of natural causes.

Eva Goodwin, 62, 1000 Rittenhouse street northwest, was knocked down by an automobile when she stepped from a street car at Seventh and O streets northwest. At Sibley Hospital she was said to have suffered severe bruises to her head and body and shock.

Cuts and bruises were suffered by three persons when their automobile struck a tree near Laurel, Md., early yesterday.

Brought here to Emergency Hospital, they were identified as Henry F. Alt, 22, 414 K street northwest, driver of the car; Almetal Harvey, 19, 412 K street northwest, and Gertrude Richman, 23, 1330 L street northwest.

Mrs. Tew died at her home Saturday. Her daughter, Mrs. Edith Lee, said her mother had been injured January 22, when she was thrown from the seat of a taxicab when the car made a sudden stop.

The jury held the death due to natural causes, however, when Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said an autopsy disclosed no injury.

Commercial Bank Receiver Resigns

Robert C. Baldwin resigned yesterday as receiver for the Commercial National Bank, which closed here February 28, 1933. His successor, it was understood last night, will be appointed soon. His resignation will become effective on March 1.

'Prize' Planned By Hollywood For Worst Film

Tentative List of 10 Movies Selected for Scallions (Gold-Plated).

By the United Press.

"Second Wife" (RKO-Radio).
"Palm Springs" (Walter Wanger).
"Under Your Spell" (Twentieth Century-Fox).
"His Brother's Wife" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).
"Yellowstone" (Universal).
"Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" (Paramount).
"Hearts Divided" (Warner Brothers-First National).
"The Melody Lingers On" (United Artists).
"Mary of Scotland" (RKO-Radio).
"Meet Nero Wolfe" (Columbia).

No final decision on the worst of the year was reached, owing to odd reluctance of selectors to vote for (or against) products of their own studios.

The academy, however, might do worse than pick up the idea and follow through. The gold-plated scallion which might well be awarded the studio receiving the peak of awfulness for the year would probably do more to promote good pictures than the gilt statuette given for the best.

A Horse on Harpo.

Newton, a sugar-loving horse, brought a bright blush to the weather-beaten neck of Harpo Marx as well as ruining a take for "Day at the Races" on the Metro back lot.

The mummest Marxer had been indulging Newton in his favorite vice, and kept the sugar in his hip pocket. When Marx turned away in conversation, Newton, who is not very bright, even as horses go, went after the sugar on his own hook, but mistook suspender buttons for the delicacy.

Gregg Toland, top comeraman, will debut as a director this year, Samuel Goldwyn having torn up his former contract. He's the second lenseman to take his camera for a megaphone this year, Hal Mohr having made the switch at Universal earlier.

Auditorium Unit May Begin Costs Study Next Week

The organization meeting of the Capital Auditorium Commission, created in an act signed yesterday by President Roosevelt, will not be before next week, Senator Connally, chairman of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, said.

Senator Connally explained he would go to Texas this week as part of the funeral escort for Representative Buchanan.

Action of the Senate committee on the bill to extend the east front of the Capitol also will be delayed.

The Capital Auditorium Commission will start its inquiry as to costs and sites of a large Federal Government auditorium promptly, however, as sponsors of the project hope to get the project started with funds to be made available by the present Congress.

To enable Congress to make an appropriation this year, the commission will have to file its report and recommendations well before adjournment.

Maj. Garey Says 'Honor' Compelled His Resignation

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23 (AP).—Maj. Enoch B. Garey, former superintendent of State police, tonight told a Senate investigating committee that "my experience with the Governor during my term of office taught me that politics played the important part of his interest in the State police."

"I was not willing to be the superintendent of a politically controlled department," he continued. "And so when the Governor said to me, 'I will not appoint any man unless he agrees to accept my suggestions as to promotion' it was not temperament, gentlemen, but honor which forced me to refuse."

Maj. Garey, who was succeeded by Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of Frederick, as police superintendent, slowly read a prepared statement when called before a committee headed by Senator John D. C. Duncan (Democrat), of Baltimore County.

Lecture Canceled.

Dr. Abram Simon, rabbi of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, has canceled the next lecture in his series, scheduled to be given in the Shoreham Hotel at 11 a. m. tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Simon will deliver lectures on March 4 and March 11 in the Shoreham, both at 11 a. m.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, by All Present Signs, Bids Fair to Win More Than One Academy Gold Statuette

Producing Company Has Five Out of Ten Pictures in Running to Say Nothing of Stars, Writers and Directors Who Have Been Nominated for First Honors; "Masque of Kings" Players to Be Seen in "Storm Over Patsy;" Davis and Berman Revive Old Memories; Gossip of the Current Playhouse.

A CURSORY analysis of the nominations for 1936 awards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences reveals that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer bids fair to walk off with a considerable number of the gold statuettes.

BELL.

Ten feature pictures nominated as candidates for first honors represent five studios. Five of the ten were produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, whose output is shown exclusively in Washington at Loew's Capitol, Palace, and Columbia Theaters. The five M-G-M productions included in the nominations are "The Great Ziegfeld," "Romeo and Juliet," "San Francisco," "A Tale of Two Cities," and "Libeled Lady." The others chosen for preferment are "Anthony Adverse," and "The Story of Louis Pasteur," from the Warner Brothers; Samuel Goldwyn's "Dodsworth," Columbia's "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," and Universal's "Three Smart Girls."

With five of the M-G-M features among the selected best, it naturally follows that a majority of the stars eligible for first honors also should represent that Culver City studio. Furthermore, several M-G-M stars were cited for work done in productions for which they were "farmed out" by the home office.

William Powell, named for his part in "My Man Godfrey," for Universal, and Spencer Tracy, for his role of the priest in "San Francisco," were two of the five actors singled out for possible first honors by the Academy committee. The others were Gary Cooper, Paul Muni, and Walter Huston, for their respective performances in "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and "Dodsworth."

Luise Rainer, Norma Shearer, and Gladys George, the last named loaned to Paramount for "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie," were the M-G-M actresses included among the five designated as candidates for the industry's highest honor.

Of five actors nominated for the best acting in a supporting role, Basil Rathbone was selected for his younger Capulet in "Romeo and Juliet." Among the actresses in the same category were Alice Brady, currently starring in "Mama Steps Out," and our old home towner, Beulah Bondi, for her work in support of Joan Crawford and Robert Taylor in "The Gorgeous Hussy."

Out of five directors nominated M-G-M placed two—W. S. Van Dyke for "San Francisco" and Robert Z. Leonard for "The Great Ziegfeld." In the writing field five were nominated, among them Norman Krasna for "Fury," William Anthony McGuire for "The Great Ziegfeld," and Robert Hopkins for "San Francisco." Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett also were nominated for their screen play of "After the Thin Man."

It looks a little as if Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer this year might make the almost clean sweep that was scored by Columbia the year they produced "It Happened One Night" and captured practically all of the academy awards in sight.

Three members of the cast of Maxwell Anderson's critically lauded "The Masque of Kings," completing his trilogy of plays currently being presented on Broadway, will be seen at the National Theater next week in the Theater Guild's comedy of "Storm Over Patsy." Word comes to this desk that in addition to Claudia Morgan, one of the featured players, Lee G. Carroll and John Hoysradt also will be released from their roles in the Anderson play in order to fill more important parts in the new production. Both Miss Morgan and Mr. Carroll are under contract to the guild for the season. Earlier in the year Miss Morgan was in "And Stars Remain," with Clifton Webb and Helen Gahagan, and Mr. Carroll was in "Prelude to Exile."

Gliding down from a high altitude to a perfect three-point landing, one learned that "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" had been unwound yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the drama desks. This is the Frederic Lonsdale whimsy that has occupied so prominent a place in the public eye since Ina Claire first appeared in it on the stage almost a decade ago.

This glib and brittle comedy has been done before on the screen, the first time with Norma Shearer in the role created by Miss Claire on the boards. The principal parts in the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the piece will be played by Joan Crawford, William Powell and Robert Montgomery, whose likenesses should appear somewhere on this page unless catastrophe has overtaken the composing room and makeup.

Not having been present at the preview, we shall have to await Friday, when it opens on the screen at Loew's Palace, for an appraisal of this highly touted fillum.

When Milton Davis sat down at the piano and Lou Berman began to sing plaintive ditties the other night, it took us back to the days of the impromptu shows that used to be put on in the early hours of the morning in the old projection room at the Metropolitan Theater. One night we had a program that featured Rudy Wiedoft, foremost of the saxophonists; Don Bestor, famous orchestra conductor; Kate Smith, the Three Radio Boys, Elias Breeskin, then numbered among the first ten violin virtuosi in the country; Nate Brusiloff, Dan Breeskin, Milton Davis and your reporter as an informal master of ceremonies. That was all brought back when Milton and Lou dropped in from the Rainbow Room of the Hamilton and began to do their stuff. Here are a couple of the lads who have what it takes. It seems strange that so clever a balladist as Lou Berman should be playing percussions and tympani in Milton's band. Anyhow, it was some fun reviving these old associations.

It is Mr. John Peter Toohey, a former feature writer on this estimable family journal, who points out that apparently without precedent in the annals of the theater is the single line which appears at the bottom of the daily advertisements for "You Can't Take It With You," the new Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman comedy, current at the Booth Theater in New York. It reads "seats for eighteen weeks on sale."

Usually, for a successful Broadway play or musical show, the box-office keeps seats for eight weeks ahead on sale. In exceptional instances, occuring perhaps once every three or four years, seats have been made available as far as 12 weeks in advance—but 18 weeks! That is something else again. Already locations have been sold as far ahead as the second week in June.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke, appearing as Dean Harcourt in "Green Light," at the Earle, was the youngest actor ever knighted by his king. He was accorded the royal accolade at the age of 42. He has spent 26 years of his life on the stage; was born in Lye, Worcestershire, the son of a country doctor. Began his dramatic studies under the tutelage of Sir Beerbohm Tree and later played in a company backed by George Bernard Shaw. He comes by his preeminence justly.

Three Stars in Brittle Comedy

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new screen version of Frederic Lonsdale's comedy of "The Last of Mrs. Cheney" is presented on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Friday, the three principal roles will be played by the popular stars pictured above. They are, of course, reading in the usual direction, Robert Montgomery, Joan Crawford and William Powell, who appear together for the first time in this picture. Frank Morgan heads the support.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

Miami Beach, Feb. 23.

THE MIAMI newspapers refused to publish a photograph of Mrs. Mortimer Loew showing her ringsiding at one of the swank spots. The temperature-proud editors objected—because, in the photograph, Mrs. Loew was wearing a fur piece! . . . Charles W. Halley, jr., the commissioner of transportation, now wintering here, is telling the Miami folk that former Sheriff Charles Culkin will become Tammany Hall's chief on March 10—and that this was decided upon at the recent Jim Farley dinner in Washington . . . Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who never smoked before entering the White House, has cultivated the habit of puffing two cigarettes a day—to make White House visitors feel at home.

MINOR AND ROOT, the dance team which opened last week at the Hollywood Country Club here, were first described in the advertisements as "The Continental Dance Team." Minor wired the press agent: "How can you be so stupid as to bill us that way? We're billed as 'Society's Loveliest Dancers.'" . . . The publicist wired back: "How can a bald guy be lovely?"

Harry Richman has installed a new bathtub at his winter home here. It can accommodate ten bathers at one time . . . Sherman Billingsley, who arrived the other day, phones his Stork Club thrice daily. Billingsley, before he left New York, hired Charlie Weighman as major domo for the dinner crowd. Weighman began his career by working behind the counter of the restaurant he bought, and his wife worked as cashier. In a few years they owned 200 restaurants. Weighman bought the Chicago Cubs and was worth $10,000,000. Then the crash dissipated his fortune . . . When the newsreel cameramen were photographing President Roosevelt he removed his glasses while the cameras turned. "Why do you do that?" the photographers asked him. "Why be photographed taking off your eyeglasses?" Roosevelt replied, "That's the only piece of stage business I know!"

ONE of the unreported tragedies of the recent Moscow trials concerns Samuel Rodman, an American residing in Moscow. Rodman represents some British newspapers in Moscow, and curried favor with the political powers there. When about a year and a half ago a son was born to Rodman he named him after one of the Soviet's most influential leaders—Karl Radek Rodman . . . And now Karl Radek has been stamped by his own confession as a traitor, assassin, counter-revolutionist, etc!

WALTER DURANTY, who covered the Moscow trials for the New York Times, visited New York a few months ago. On the first day back he was invited to partake of a new thrill. Duranty, Heywood Broun and I rode through Manhattan's streets in Walter Winchell's short-wave radio-equipped car and responded to police calls . . . A call from Sixty-fifth street and Broadway summoned aid for a young lady who had been knifed by a girl friend. The assailant was arrested, brought to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station and there we watched the proceedings . . . Last month Duranty asked me about that girl who had wielded the knife. "I'll wager that it's all forgotten now," he stated. "We'll never hear of her again" . . . Nothing was heard of her until Tuesday, when she was arrested again. Her name is Norma Parker. She's the "girl in black" who, with a toy pistol, had held up four Broadway cafes!

TED HUSING went to a driving range near Biscayne Bay yesterday. The distance markers aren't quite accurate, so that golf dubs driving 125 yards would believe they'd driven the ball 200 yards. Then they'd return to the only range where they believe they can get off long drives . . . Husing, practicing a chip shot, drove his ball to the 100-yard marker. "Is that really 100 yards?" he asked the proprietor. The owner assured him the measurement was accurate . . . Ted handed his clock watch to a companion, crouched a la Jesse Owens and lumbered slowly across the field to the 100-yard mark. He checked the time, turned to the proprietor and stated: "Mister, if your markers are correct you've just seen the world's 100-yard record broken!"

ANNA LOUISE STRONG and Millie Mitchell went from Russia to Spain to cover the warfare from the loyalist side. They were warned to drop on their tummies whenever they heard gunfire . . . Firing began and they dropped flat to the earth—in a muddy spot . . . Miss Mitchell heard a piping voice behind her ask: "Millie, am I sticking up anywhere?" Miss Mitchell turned around—to look at her statuesque companion—and replied: "Everywhere, my dear, everywhere!"

'Red-Head' Gang's Crimes Mounting

Detectives discovered that a gun stolen from the home of Capt. Carter W. Clarke, U. S. A., in the 3700 block of Benton street northwest, was the one used by the gang in its crimes.

Officers discovered that more than $1,000 in silver had been stolen from the cabinets in the home of Roger B. McWorten in the 3600 block of Davis street northwest.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, Feb. 23.—Memories that bless and burn: When Gloria Swanson's toy bull dragged a silk step-in into the drawing room during one of La Swanson's ultra teas. When Tom Mix's butler greeted folks with, "Haven't seen you for weeks. Come up any time and I'll shake up a drink for you." When Joan Crawford stopped at a drive-in sandwich stand en route to a funeral, and made a startling picture, clad in mourning and munching a hot dog.

CLARA BOW.

When William Powell (then playing Philo Vance detective roles) locked himself in the bathroom, pushed the key under the door and tried to pick the lock. He had to escape through a window in his pajamas. When Joseph Schenck, sagacious and usually prophetic head of Twentieth Century-Fox studios, told the press, ". . . talking pictures will not last."

When the woman-writer of scripts for "Baby Marie" Osborne said, "My daughter Virginia will be in pictures some day" (the woman was Lela Rogers, mother of Ginger). When Bing Crosby, known simply as "One of the Three Rythm Boys" at Coconut Grove, was almost fired for irregularity in reporting to work. When Mary Pickford, just two years married to Douglas Fairbanks, said in an interview, ". . . the tenth year of marriage is hardest to weather." How did she guess?

Unable to reach Joan Crawford by telephone for important information, I was forced to run out to her house. She explained that she had just had her confidential number changed. "I don't know the new number myself," she smiled, "and when I called information, I was told it would not be given out."

Hardly had we laughed this off before the telephone rang and Joan answered, thinking it was the 'phone company about the new number. It was a jewelry salesman! He wanted Joan to look at two diamonds, to pick one gem which Franchot Tone wanted to buy for her. "How did you ever get this number?" Miss Crawford fairly shrieked. And the salesman replied blandly, "From downtown company that specializes in furnishing private numbers—for a fee!"

Since Hugh Herbert (I always want to say Hubert Herbert) and his wife have an ironclad agreement that she is not to call him at the studio unless it is a matter of life and death, you may imagine his feelings the other morning when a office boy interrupted a scene to announce, "Your wife is on the telephone, and she says it's a matter of life and . . ." The boy never finished the message because Hugh was already on the run. When he reached the telephone, out of breath and scared, Mrs. Herbert enthused, "Mrs. Pinky just had 11 children!" Which, as Mrs. H. argued with her husband later, was really a matter of life, inasmuch as Mrs. Pinky is Hugh's prize Poland-China sow.

* X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1937 19

This Morning . . .

Without Shirley Povich

By Loren Pope.

For many moons, as many as we can remember, this column has been giving the silent treatment to one of the most rabid of sports cliques.

Whether the reason has been ignorance, foresight or indifference, makes no difference. But we, from long intimacy with that fraternity and its unholy love, must admit a hearty thankfulness nothing has been done to stimulate its growth.

POPE.

Its weedy spread is, in fact, rapidly assuming the proportions of a factor in the American way of life and threatens to become as well entrenched as the evil that a man must doff his hat when a lady squeezes herself into the elevator.

No phlegmatic Nordic goes into more rapture over a bridge hand; golf is no more alluring to those with the post-mortem habit, nor jazz as fascinating to youth as dogs to canine fanciers.

Professional baseball players are notorious for their singleness of conversation. Awakening, they review their feats of the day before in a sort of morning devotion. With breakfast, they predict the things they'll do today. With lunch the topic assumes a more cultural aspect. The averages of other players and their personalities are admitted. And with dinner comes a thorough autopsy of the day on the field.

But these mono-minded boys would be struck with the singleness of conversation of a happily met group of fido addicts. Whether those not of their own faith are in the group or not, a great conversational wall is thrown up that repels the heaviest attacks of another topic.

It is our observation that Mr. J. C. Anybody does an average amount of cussing in the course of his daily routine.

Yet we have seen any number of citizens, able masters of profanity, marooned in a conversational island with a gathering of mutt-maniacs, recoil at the ordinary and casual expressions in their terminology like one, who, in his bare skin, has backed up against a cold radiator on a winter morning.

It is such social tendencies as this that have wrought bitter changes in our law. The excesses of the minority bring forth strong acts of desperation on the part of the beleaguered majority. For example, it was a situation like this threatening one that brought prohibition as a counter attack by the actively disinterested.

Golf and bridge clubs, by segregating those affected, serve a healthy community purpose, and the ever-increasing organization of kennel clubs may do the same thing. We hope.

However, since we've started, you may as well know a fact and a figure or two about dogs and why, when you drop in at the Plaid-Kilt Kennels to buy a dog, your wife faints when they quote you a price of $50 for that little Scottie pup she was in love with.

In the first place there is a tacit agreement among the better breeders, using Scottish (not Scotch) terriers, as an example, not to sell good pups for less than $35 for females and $50 for males.

This does not hold in the case of a skinny little thing with a crooked tail, ears that won't stand up, or legs that bely the underslung Scottie requisites.

To the bewildered this may seem evil. It is not. Every puppy automatically costs a good breeder between $10 and $15 at the date of his birth. This outlay represents stud fees and the distemper serum that must be administered in about eight weeks or so. Good breeders don't let their dogs mate how and when and with what they may happen to like.

This business is done strictly as a matter of genetics, that is, trying to find a mate that will augment the good traits of the mother, or father. And the mating price is a puppy, $25, $35, $50 or even $100.

And if you think these snooty purebreds eat whatever table scraps happen to be left over, you're all wrong. The chances are the food they eat is more carefully prescribed than were your own infant meals.

When weaned they go on a diet of evaporated milk, strained vegetables, and such baby preparations as dextri-maltose. Later they get hamburger mixed with vegetables and prepared dog food. The cost for food alone in a kennel of 35 or 40 dogs, to a careful breeder, runs around $600 or $700 a year.

Those items and the many unforseen things that keep the veterinarian coming out make the raising of dogs an expensive hobby or a vocation with a considerable overhead.

Reason for all this care is that our good breeder raises his dogs for the show ring. He's infinitely more interested in whether this one has a good eye, nice quarters, short body, is low slung, than in raising dogs just to sell.

With these breeders, most of whom do it as a hobby, the price you pay for a pup makes possible his avocation that may cost from $900 to double or triple that in a year.

And since we've gone in this deep, we may as well give the usual bit of advice by way of initiatiing the great unwashed. Its very important if you're getting the canine cholera. 'Tis this:

Merely because you're buying a "purebred" dog who may have a glittering array of blue ribbon ancestors, you're not getting an animal that's any better than any mutt you could carry away from the dog pound. Unless of course, you want to make sure only of the morals and race of his forebearers.

Western Beats Roosevelt, 31-20; Wilson Routed, 49-18, by Tech

Still playing second fiddle, more or less, to Eastern High's champions, Western breezed into the runner-up position in the inter-high series yesterday by disposing of Roosevelt, 31-20, before a sparse attendance in the Tech Gymnasium. Near to first place, but yet so very, very far from it, Western is resting its hopes on a Tech upset of Eastern, Friday night, the only thing that can give it a chance for the title.

In the other inter-high collision of the day, Wilson High ran afoul of Tech's inspired contingent at Roosevelt and succumbed, 49-18. Coach Rusty Thompson gave most of his Techmen a vigorous work-out while they went through the formality of disposing of the inexperienced Green.

Though in fourth place at present, Tech can still ascend into a second place tie by upsetting Eastern, while Central upsets Western Friday.

Western Gains Lead.

Western, however, was highly impressive in rebuffing the Rough Riders, rushing to a 7-2 lead in the first period and a 16-8 lead by the time the half had elapsed. Led by Joe Comer, who outshone George DeWitt, high-scoring Western Center, Roosevelt bounced back in the ball game in the third period, nearly overtaking the gyrating Georgetowners.

With Comer piling up his 13-point total gradually, Roosevelt cut down the 16-8 lead to 20-19. The light-haired, lanky Comer had scored all but seven of his team's points as the third quarter ended with this score.

Western, however, staged a flashy finish, holding Roosevelt to a single foul shot in the last quarter, while Hugo Schulze, Red guard, continued to roll up his 12-point total, half of them in the final stanza.

Comer Takes Honors.

The duel between the two chief candidates for All-High center, Comer and DeWitt, found them setting a hot pace. The Rough Rider, for the second time in the series,

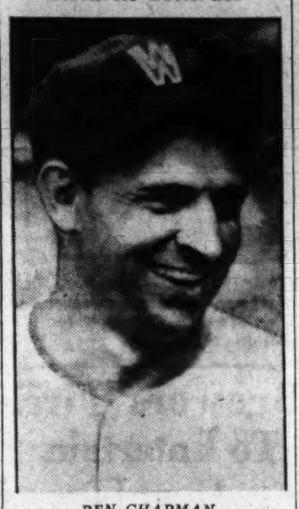
Returns Contract



BEN CHAPMAN.

Chapman, voted the most valuable player with the Washington Senators last summer, said today he had returned his contract to Clark Griffith, club president. The word came from Montgomery, Ala. "Don't get me wrong," Ben said. "I'm no holdout. I just told Griff I'd prefer to talk things over after I get to camp, rather than by mail."

Sutherland Denies He'll Quit Post

Panther Grid Coach Hits Reports; Meets With Harrison Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

Endicott, N. Y., Feb. 28.—Dr. John Bain (Jock) Sutherland scoffed tonight at reports that he would resign as head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh.

"There are a lot of persons," he said in an interview, "that seem to know more about the situation than I do. I'd like to tell 'em not to be too sure that I'm going to quit."

Reports spread in Pittsburgh today that Sutherland would leave the university as the result of differences with W. Don Harrison, athletic director.

The Panther coach, here on what he called a "good-will" tour, conceded that the reports were based on a "slight misunderstanding" with Harrison. He asserted, however, that he expected the difficulty to be ironed out at a conference with university officials at Pittsburgh Thursday.

Meanwhile, in Pittsburgh, the University of Pittsburgh Varsity Letter Club tonight adopted a resolution urging the Athletic Council to refuse to accept the resignation if it is tendered.

In what was believed to be the first taking of sides in the "feud" between Coach Sutherland and Harrison the club recommnded that:

1. The Athletic Council refuse to accept Sutherland's resignation.

2. Immediate steps be taken to remove "any obstacles" that might stand in the way of Dr. Sutherland's remaining as football coach "for many years to come."

The resolution was sent to members of the Athletic Council, to Chancellor John G. Bowman and to Dr. Sutherland.

Both the principals have built up enviable records—Harrison boosted Pitt's standing until the Panthers were meeting leading schools throughout the Nation—Sutherland did his part by turning out consistently victorious football squads.

Some close observers said that Harrison, genial and mustached, and Sutherland, the silent one, even have gone so far this time as to have quit speaking when they meet.

The latest—and maybe last disagreement—was generally agreed to have been based on these three points:

1. That Sutherland wanted the Pitt players to receive some funds for a celebration after they trounced Washington in the Rose Bowl game last New Year's Day, but Harrison disagreed.

2. That they argued about the celebration, and Harrison, in anger, declared to Sutherland: "I made you and now I'm going to break you."

3. That recent changes in the coaching staff at Pitt were without Sutherland's approval, and came after Harrison disapproved increases in salary for the silent Scot's assistants.

If Sutherland should decide to hand in his resignation—Pitt officials say they have no knowledge of such intentions—the big question of whether it would be accepted would be up to the athletic council.

$9,000 Contract Signed by Powell

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—The New York Yankees broke the "Big Five" holdout trust today by signing Outfielder Jake Powell to a $9,000 contract.

Powell was offered $7,500 at first and asked $14,000. He was signed to a $5,000 Washington contract last year. Because of his good work after being traded in mid-season to the Yankees, he was given a $1,000 bonus.

$30,000 Offer Ends A.A.U. Quarrel

Pretty Olympic Star to Make Debut as Pro Next Summer.

'I'd Give Up This Offer in a Minute' to Be Reinstated.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—Eleanor Holm Jarrett, who acquired fame by rocking the Olympic boat last summer, added the fortune today by signing a $30,000 contract to appear in the Great Lakes Exposition show in Cleveland this summer.

This move ended the weary wrangle over her amateur standing. Mrs. Jarrett, dropped from the Olympic team for breaking training rules, was subsequently barred from amateur European competition by the amateur athletic union. This suspension was vaguely maintained when she returned to this country, but there was still some hope of reinstatement until she executed her professional move today.

"I'd have given up this offer in a minute if the A. A. U. had voluntarily reinstated me," Mrs. Jarrett said, "but I know they won't. If I'd apply for reinstatement, it would just mean slinging that Olympic mud all over again. I don't want to do that. Life's too short."

Mrs. Jarrett admitted, however, that $30,000 was a handy little sum, and she sees plenty more than that coming up.

"I've been a sap," continued the beauteous Eleanor. "I've had all kinds of offers, thanks to Avery Brundage and the other A. A. U. officials, and I've turned them all down, but I read in the papers the other day that even the metropolitan district committeemen are against me, so I decided to cash in."

Mrs. Jarrett recently swam in connection with a District of Columbia A. A. U. meet, but National A. A. U. officials quickly pointed out that the District officials had no right to let her swim.

Terp Cagers Upset, 39-37

Paced by bushy-browed Johnny Lambros, a clear-visioned forward, a calm and easy-going St. John's quintet from Annapolis last night upset Maryland's highly favored Terrapins at College Park, winning by a score of 39 to 27.

Visibly off stride and unable to organize its scattered forces for one decisive thrust, Maryland went down to defeat after gaining a 35-28 lead with five minutes left to play. But Lambros ran wild in those last fleeting moments, and assisted by Bill Ross and Jim Rowe not only erased the deficit but carried the Crabtown delegation to one of the biggest upsets of the season.

Maryland almost caught its cocky little opponent in the last 30 seconds of play when Al Waters sank one long shot and "Knocky" Thomas let fly with another.

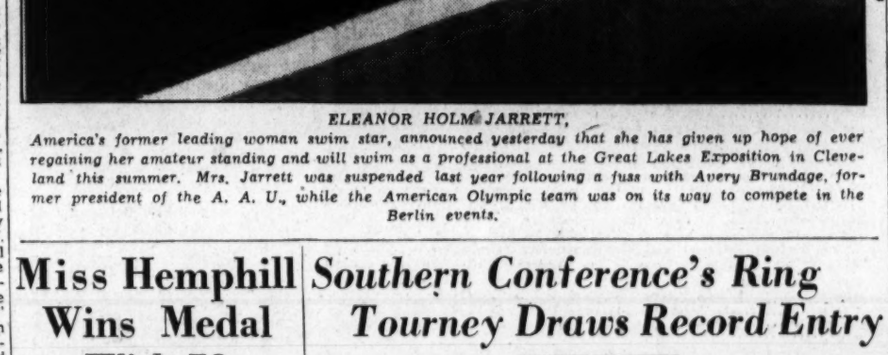
Brevity, Ailing, Out of Widener

Race Track, Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 23 (AP).—J. E. Widner announced here today that his good horse Brevity has been going along nicely in his work but recently his troublesome leg "popped" out making it impossible for him to continue to be trained. Brevity won the Florida Derby and was beaten in the Kentucky Derby by Bold Venture. He was also beaten in the Withers Stakes finishing second to White Cockade. He will probably be out of racing for some time.



ELEANOR HOLM JARRETT,

America's former leading woman swim star, announced yesterday that she has given up hope of ever regaining her amateur standing and will swim as a professional at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland this summer. Mrs. Jarrett was suspended last year following a fuss with Avery Brundage, former president of the A. A. U., while the American Olympic team was on its way to compete in the Berlin events.

Miss Hemphill Wins Medal With 73

Patty Berg Stroke Away; Helen Dettweiler Gets 80 in Florida.

By the United Press.

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 23.—Kathryn Hemphill, the husky South Carolina girl who hits one of the longest drives in women's golf, equaled the women's competitive course record with a 73 today to win the qualifying medal of the South Atlantic championships.

Scorning the brisk wind which swept the seaside Ormond Beach links, Miss Hemphill was out in 39 and home in 34, to tie the mark established by Patty Berg in the qualifying test a year ago.

Miss Berg, winner of three winter tournaments this season and a heavy favorite to capture this one in which she was 1936 runner-up, finished a stroke behind Miss Hemphill. Patty was out in 37, 1 under men's par, and might have returned in 34 had her putter been a bit luckier.

Jean Bauer, the pretty Providence, R. I., star, took third place with a fine 76. Jean Cothran, diminutive Greenville, S. C., player, and Marion Miley, the quiet Lexington, Ky., ace, were next in line with 77s. Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, had a 78 and Goldie Bateson, of Milwaukee, a 79. These were the only entrants in the large field to break 80.

Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., carded an 80. The other eight players who managed to get into the first flight and their scores: Mrs. W. R. Stafford, New York, 83; Mrs. Leon Solomon, Memphis, and Mrs. William Hockenjos, Lake Hopatcong, N. J., 85's; Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, 88; Mrs. G. G. Blaisdell, Waterville, Me., 85; Jean Van Landingham, Charlotte, N. C., 88; M. Gayer, Charleston, S. C., 85, and Betty Botterill, Salt Lake City, 89.

Tomorrow's first-round pairings: Hemphill vs. Stafford; Cothran vs. Solomon; Bauer vs. Hockenjos; Bateson vs. Zech; Berg vs. Blaisdell; Traung vs. Van Landingham; Miley vs. Gayer; Dettweiler vs. Botterill.

Ellen Kincaid, another Washington girl, missed making the first flight by one stroke. She carded a 45, 45—90.

Southern Conference's Ring Tourney Draws Record Entry

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Eleventh-hour entries yesterday swelled the Southern Conference tournament lists to 55 belligerent candidates as the committee in charge of the two-day affair scheduled Friday and Saturday at the University of Maryland sat down to figure pairings for the preliminary bouts.

The list is the largest in the tournament's 11-year history, and it augurs well for a successful affair, inasmuch as most of the classes boast a number of dark horses in well balanced fields who may turn the experts' figuring topsy-turvy.

One of the most peculiar entries is that of Alec Males, of Maryland, who started boxing as a middleweight, moved up to the light-heavyweight class for his second bout, and is entering the tournament as a heavyweight. It's hard to figure, but then again Males, a stiff puncher and much improved boxer, may do better against a slower, heavier opponent than against a smaller man.

The outstanding heavyweight at this writing appears to be Orville Rogers, of the Citadel, whose best win was scored over Isbell, of Army, at West Point. Isbell, it is well to note, floored Leo Katalinas, of Catholic University, twice to win on a technical knockout, and any time anybody puts Leonine Leo on the carpet he has something on the ball.

Katalinas, in turn, knocked out Don Schmitt, of Duke, in the first round. Schmitt defeated Polattie, of South Carolina, and earned a draw with Lanny Alderman, of North Carolina, all of which gives him a fairly decent chance of reaching the finals in the dope book. But by comparison, via his bout with Isbell, Rogers looks to be at least 50 per cent better than the Duke representative, and will be rated accordingly in pretournament odds.

Males is not the lone dark horse in the field, for Mike West, of Richmond, normally a lightweight, has elected to cast his bid for a heavyweight title. One reason—and a good one—may be that Johnny Gormley, of Maryland, who defeated him, is a candidate for the light-heavy crown; and another is Ray Matulewicz, titleholder, and to all outward appearances the most polished fighter in the tournament.

German to Claim Title If Louis Gets the Bout

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—The Daily News says Max Schmeling will claim the championship if Jimmy Braddock fails to appear for his scheduled bout with the German here June 3.

Quoting Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's American representative, as author of the plan, the paper says Schmeling probably will be matched with Max Baer or Bob Pastor, and the winner recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission as champion. Under its rules, the commission will be forced to declare the title open if Braddock fails to fulfill his contract with Madison Square Garden.

Tech Will Get 'First Rate' Diamond

$2,500 Fence 10 Feet High Will Girdle Central High Stadium.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Improvements costing roughly $8,000 have been ordered for the athletic fields at Eastern, Central and Tech High Schools, it was learned yesterday. Work has already started on a $1,000 face-lifting job for Eastern's baseball diamond.

Outstanding among the developments explained by Assistant Superintendent of Schools Jeremiah J. Crane, director of public school construction, is the erection of a 10-foot wire fence around Central Stadium. High school officials have long urged this particular step, which Crane estimated would cost approximately $2,500.

In addition to construction of the fence, two large South entrances will be closed and their steps removed.

The third development, the assistant superintendent explained, "will give Tech a first-rate ball diamond." Although nominally improvements for Langley Junior High's athletic field, they will furnish a diamond for Tech's baseball team probably superior to any school field in the city. The shortest field, Crane said, would have a limit of about 400 feet from home plate.

Work to Start in Summer.

This development will not be finished in time for the coming baseball season, however. In fact, work on it will probably not start until late summer. The fence for Central Stadium, on the other hand, will be "as soon as weather and other conditions permit," Crane predicted.

A sizable crew of PWA workers under the District Repair Shop is removing sod from the Eastern infield at the present in the initial steps of giving this hotbed of baseball the coveted "skinned infield."

Hedge to Be Cut.

The assistant superintendent said the hedge around Eastern's right-field "will have to be trimmed." Terming it "pretty wild," he explained the towering barrier will be cut down to approximately a 3 or 4-foot level. The work at Eastern is expected to be finished by April 1, Crane added.

The Central fence, Crane estimated, will "extend some 900 feet, about 10 or 12 feet high." It will extend completely around the stadium. Along Florida avenue it will top the outer wall, run up the Thirteenth and Eleventh street sides and in back of the stadium seats on the north, alongside the balustrade at the top of the stadium steps.

The agitation for a fence became especially strong in 1934 following the so-called Tech-Western football "near riot" in Central Stadium. At that time, it was claimed many persons figuring in the disturbance would not have straggled around the field during the game if a fence had surrounded it.

"Several thousand dollars" will be expended in the Langley development, Crane pointed out. This will include construction of three new tennis courts, change of the entrance of the Langley Pool and grading and preparation of a play field and baseball diamond.

The baseball diamond will occupy the area now called the "terraces," an area used for play by junior high students. Home plate will be nearer Langley and the batter will hit out toward Tech.

"It will take a Babe Ruth," Crane said, "to clear the outfield with a hit on that diamond."

Tintagel, Odds-On Choice, Wins Fast Hialeah Sprint Feature

'35 Futurity Hero Near Record

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 23.—Marshall Field's 1935 Belmont Futurity hero, Tintagel, finally broke the jinx that has shadowed him in Florida this winter and won the featured Tampico Handicap here today. It was the bay colt's fifth start at the Miami Jockey Club track. Nick Wall took no chances and plied his whip all through the stretch, despite the fact that Tintagel had his three rivals soundly thrashed. The son of Sir Galahad 3d—Heloise won by six lengths under ridden-out tactics.

Louise J. Hickman's veteran, Dusty Dawn, earned the place by a length from the Araho Stable's Mucho Gusto. Four lengths farther back came the 3-year-old filly Goldey F., owned by Mrs. W. A. Bridges. The latter is a nominee for the Flamingo Stakes, but held a very unlikely starter.

For most of the first furlong it looked as if Jockey Wall was going to rate Tintagel, but the Chicago-owned sprinter soon shot past the fast-starting Goldey F., and opened up plenty of daylight around the bend. Goldey F. had enough early and Dusty Dawn took up the futile chase. Far in front, Tintagel never faltered in the stretch and won in hollow style. Wall did not put up his whip until well inside the sixteenth pole, then he went to a vigorous hand ride. Tintagel's time was one-fifth of a second slower than Whopper's track mark, which the latter made in the opening day handicap mile while beating Tintagel by a narrow margin.

Mrs. Emil Denemark's consistent colt Radio Charm, $4.10 for $2 choice in a field of 12 2-year-old platers, marked up his fourth victory in seven starts in the 3-furlong event that opened today's program. Charlie Kurtsinger, adding to his lead over local riders, had the bay son of Jean Lafitte in front from end to end. He had to ride the mount out to the limit to get the purse by a nose. Johnnie Dear and Who Knows, the latter coupled with Idolize, provided strong contention throughout the running. Johnnie Dear saved the place by a half-length. The time was 0:33 4-5.

Blakeen, a hard filly to guess, turned in one of her best efforts to win the second race of 7 furlongs. Paying $34.90 for a $2 straight ticket, the coal black plater jumped right to the front and held sway the remainder of the trip, winning by two lengths in easy fashion. Philippi Boy, carrying the bulk of the play, chased the winner all the way. He just lasted to head Fair Play for secondary honors.

Another unexpected victory developed when Sam Worthy dominated the running of the third, also decided over the 7-furlong distance. The veteran sprinter clicked by a length, ridden out by Apprentice Barba, and returned $16.30. Toni caught Square just before reaching the wire, annexing the place by a head. Square, ridden by Bobby Merritt, who returned to the saddle today after resting on the sidelines since his fall of February 6, forced the pace and tired right at the end.

Movie Lass was selected by the talent for the fourth race, but the filly, after being extricated from early trouble, could only finish second to the $12.40 for $2 chance, M. J. Brennan. The latter, judiciously rated off the pace by Eddie Litzenberger, moved into command after turning for home as the fast starting Manda's Baby faltered. M. J. Brennan then romped clear, to register by three lengths. Movie Lass, showing a game effort, earned the place by a half length over the fast closing Beveau.

Gun Club Elects.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 23.—At a meeting of the Pendleton County Rod and Gun Club last night officers for the year were elected as follows: Leo Skidmore, president; William Gordon, North Fork, and George W. Nesselrodt, South Fork, vice presidents; Fred Calhoun, secretary and treasurer. Plans for the year were made embracing the drive for the extermination of vermin and propagation of wild life.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—RADIO CHARM, $4.10, $2.80, $2.40; JOHNNIE DEAR, $3.70, $2.80; WHO KNOWS (entry), $2.90.

RADIO CHARM got away good, but had to be hard ridden all the way to stand off the determined bid of JOHNNIE DEAR. The latter on the inside all the way down the straightaway. WHO KNOWS swerved at the break, but finished with good courage. BESTEST improving. BLOOMER GIRL is worth noting.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners in 1937. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:32. Off at 2:34½. Winner, Mrs. J. McGraw's blk. f. (4), by Sun Edwin—Hurry Home. Trained by J. McGraw. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:25.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLAKEEN, $34.90, $12.10, $8.10; PHILIPPI BOY, $5.20, $4.20; FAIR TIME, $6.30.

BLAKEEN, showing marked improvement, broke very fast, ran into lead and drew away easily at end. PHILIPPI BOY ran good race for his first effort. FAIR TIME slipped through on inside and finished fast. GOLD STANDARD was taken out around turn and finished out in the middle of the track. CHRYSMUTE is sure to improve.

$2.00 DAILY DOUBLE, FIRST AND SECOND RACES, PAID $77.20.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners in 1937. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:02½. Winner, Medway Stable's b. g. (6), by Worthmore—Samoa. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:24 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAM WORTHY, $16.30, $7.40, $4.70; TONI, $8.20, $6.10; SQUARE, $4.40.

SAM WORTHY assumed command early, saved ground, but was ridden out at end. TONI was taken very wide in stretch and finished with a rush. SQUARE, under light weight, was a stout factor. MELODY MAID finished gamely. MILLIMETER tired.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners in 1937. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:31½. Winner, W. M. †G. W. Coburn-Mrs. J. A. Coburn entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—M. J. BRENNAN, $12.40, $5.50, $3.60; MOVIE LASS, $4.20, $2.90; BEVEAU (entry), $3.60.

M. J. BRENNAN broke alertly and rated along to the middle of the turn, was sent up on the outside, assumed command in stretch, drew out and won nicely in hand. MOVIE LASS broke good, but was shuffled back, came with a good rush in the stretch. BEVEAU broke slow as usual, came around field and was closing fast. MANDA'S BABY had plenty of speed, but tired badly. KENNER had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Tampico Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward, nonwinners in 1937. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:00. Off at 4:01½. Winner, Marshall Field's b. c. (4), by Sir Gallahad III—Heloise. Trained by G. M. Odom. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:10.

GOLDEY F.	(Barba)	100	3	1	2¹½	3²	4	4	4	3.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TINTAGEL, $3.80, $3.10; DUSTY DAWN, $4.30. (No show mutuels.)

TINTAGEL broke fast and was sent to the front in the first furlong, opened up a good gap around turn and boy was driving him hard all through stretch; DUSTY DAWN moved up fast around turn, but was no match for the winner. MUCHO GUSTO came along at end and easily took the show. GOLDEY F. had speed for three furlongs, then quit.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and a furlong (turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:31. Off at 4:33. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' ch. g. (6), by Vespasian—Alma Ata. Trained by J. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth money split, $25 each. Time, 1:53 2-5. (Turf course record.)

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEEDEEQUE, $8.70, $3.90, $3.00; LIVE ONE, $4.40, $3.40; PLAY CHANCE, $4.50.

PEEDEEQUE got away fast, was caught in close quarters in run down backstretch; boy eased him back and then shot him up on the outside. PEEDEEQUE closed fast, ran on in stretch turn, but LIVE ONE was sent to the front early, displayed good speed and made a game effort. PLAY CHANCE trailed the pack, but came with a rush in final quarter mile. OVER YONDER had good early speed. ATTA KNIGHT liked the grass course and finished fast. STAR BUD never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter milees. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:02. On at 5:05. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's b. m. (5), by Bunting—Denroy. Trained by A. E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 2:05 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PENRILL, $8.30, $4.10, $3.00; BRINY DEEP, $3.40, $2.60; CONTRAST, $2.80.

PENRILL began to close ground in last half mile, caught the leaders at the furlong pole and won going away. BRINY DEEP made his bid in stretch, but was no match for the winner. CONTRAST, well ridden, had no excuse. TREASURE SHIP circled field and was running very fast at end. MAID OF ARCHES stopped badly. BRISTLE had speed for six furlongs.

A. A. U. Court Tourney Entries Close Tonight

Selections at Hialeah.

Dear Al:

Whoever was putting the evil eye on my selections (perhaps it was Chief, himself) let up a little yesterday and we chased home four winners. Radio Charm, M. J. Brennan, Tintagel and Peedeeque marched just as we hoped. My friend Jimmy Carroll, of St. Louis, has sent me the odds he is laying on the Santa Anita Handicap. He writes that he considers 22 horses as likely starters. The horses and the present odds are: Rosemont, 4-1; Gold Seeker, 30-1; Mr. Bones, 8-1; Seabiscuit, 4-1; Indian Broom, 6-1; Sangreal, 60-1; Moonside, 60-1; Firthorn, 20-1; Time Supply, 12-1; Giant Killer, 40-1; Don Roberto, 80-1; Chanceview, 12-1; Sobriety, 60-1; Sablin, 100-1; Accolade, 25-1; Sir Emerson, 30-1; Primilus, 60-1; Jabot, 50-1; Star Shadow, 15-1; Special Agent, Boxthorn and Red Rain, no prices. The cold winter that cut down the attendance and the betting at the West Coast track is reflected in a new policy that finds the track for the first time failing to pay the freight on the Eastern turf-writers who have been covering the $100,000 race. In fact, the track, so I understand, would cut the purse in half if it could save its face.

BILL.

First race—Notoriety breaks from the outside and may escape the jamming that usually goes with a bulky field of this sort. Westrope will do the riding and, as Clocker Mike used to say, he's better than a greenhorn. Scarce is the one to beat. This one was knocked at the break last out. Ed Sullivan for the show.

Second race—Ruby Peto, another Westrope mount, gets the call in this sprint. She has been a maiden a long time and on her best effort should score. Elizabeth Farley figures on some races. Sister Fan to take care of the others.

Third race—Mamas Choice fits well in this field and likes the route. Needs only the right handling. Miney Myerson is much better than that last. Mystic Sign is improved and may take it all.

Fourth race—South Bend earns his oats in this kind of company. Breaks off the rail and may be Westrope's third winner of the day. Great Haste carries much weight, but has speed. Brandon Prince for the minor award.

Fifth race—Bow and Arrow may run one for the public here. The Bradleyite looks like a lock. Higher Cloud has good speed and could win if the top one makes mistakes. Count Arthur for third money.

Sixth race—Zay has gradually been working toward a winning effort. Draws the veteran Joe Renick for the saddlework and, at the weights, I'm going to string along. Blind Pig is too heavily burdened I believe. Paradisical may figure in the running.

Seventh race—Jim John carries 118 pounds over a long route and I believe he packs the punch necessary to account for the main payoff. Strategist II looms as the one to beat. Tellwhy for third place.

Eighth race — Bullfinch's recent races suggest good form and this one is deserving of the call. Happy Flag failed me last out. Strophe and Maddening have been paddock tips.

Best bet—Bow and Arrow.

Post League Champs Get Baseballs

15 of Heurich Nine, the Unlimited Titlists Get Gold Awards.

Fifteen members of the Heurich Brewer Baseball Team, champions of the National City League of The Post Sandlot Association, were awarded Post gold baseballs last night at the annual all-sports get-together of the Heurich management at the plant. The Brewers also were given the Atlas Sport Store trophy, presented to Chris Heurich, jr., by Victor A. Gauzza, league president.

After receiving the baseballs, the Brewers elected Ed Radkte team captain for the coming season and decided to re-enter the National City Loop. Among the 50 baseball, basketball, soccer and bowling team members of Heurich teams, the following gave brief talks: Heurich, Chris Wegner, Ed Blakeney, Bill Flester, Bob McDonald, Guazza.

Those awarded The Post gold baseballs were Capt. Fee Colliere, Jesse James, Everett Russell, Bob Lyons, Ed Radtke, Bill Shelton, Otts Zahn, Huck Stahl, Tommy Thompson, Ralph Benny, Dick Knight, Gordon Freas, Archie Scribner, Bill Flester, Chris Heurich.

Miss Gulli Bowls High Set for Night

Lorraine Gulli rolled high single and high set last night to steal the honors of the Washington Ladies League matches on the Arcadia alleys. Miss Gulli smashed the pins for 143 and 379, while the Colonials took high game of 526 and set of 1,520.

In the Lutheran Church League, Perryman, of Trinity, hit 149 and 358 for high individual game and set while Trinity rolled 55 for high game, with high set of 1,600 going to Luther Place.

The Columbia Heights League saw Eddie Espey, of Hertz, hit 164, while Norman Daxton, of Vincent's, rolled 416 for high set, with Vincent's taking the team laurels with 631 and 1,774.

Anna Bout and Mercedes Iseman won free entry to the Lucille Young Sweeps.

Baxter, Hader Meet In a Grudge Bout

Wrestling fans are afforded a banner attraction tomorrow night at Turner's Arena when Laverne Baxter, the North Carolina bearcat, faces Jack Hader, of New York, for a one-fall finish. Bitter foes for a lengthy period, Hader and Baxter are reported to pointing for a "grudge" match with little or nothing barred.

In the supporting cast, Cliff Olsen and Jack Katan meet in another promising grapple, with Hank Barbour and Russ Ryan contributing still further entertainment in a preliminary.

Legion Bowling Team To Oppose Baltimore

The American Legion Ten-Man team will engage the Baltimore Ten-Man team at the Lucky Strike alleys tomorrow night in the final block of an intercity match.

The local aggregation won by 174 pins recently in the Monumental city in the initial block. The Washington team will be composed of Brown, Kee, Schlegel, H. Campbell, Chaconas, Grimes, Sarver, Milne, Share and Walker.

Following the game match for the ten-man team, the local department commander, Horace W. Lineburg, will engage in a singles match with the Department Commander of Maryland J. Bryan Hobbs.

The visiting pinmen will be entertained at the Hayloft Club following the matches.

Garden Has Another Contract Battle on Its Hands—Over Baer

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 23.—Brig. Gen. Alfred Cecil Critchley, big-time London sports promoter, is in town to put some pressure on the New York State Athletic Commission and Max Baer tomorrow.

The Britisher, whose greyhound tracks last year netted a cool $1,500,000, with the totalisators registering $150,000,000, will match his contract with Baer for a fight in London on May 6 against Madison Square Garden's contract calling for the former champion to launch his comeback against Bob Pastor in the Garden on March 19.

"I don't propose to quibble about the matter," said Critchley, "Either Baer goes through with my offer or I'm through with him. I don't want any part of him if he fights Pastor. Personally, I think it's silly for him to fight Pastor. If he beats him, what has he gained? Nothing. If he loses, he's through.

Jimmy Johnston, Garden boxing director, sought Baer as an opponent of Pastor immediately after the former football player "slayed" ten rounds with Joe Louis.

Hoffman realized that the idea of a Baer-Pastor match, in fact any kind of a match involving Baer after he lost the title to Jim Braddock and was pummeled by Joe Louis, would cause some eye-brow lifting by the State athletic commissioners when their approval was sought by the Garden.

So, in accepting the Pastor match, Hoffman stuck in the contract a clause specifying he would accept the match only if the Garden obtained the commission's approval on February 10, otherwise Baer would go to London. So far as is known, the commission has not sanctioned the bout and Baer is scheduled to appear before the solons tomorrow.

Hoffman admitted he is a bit confused but feels sure Baer is sure of at least one fight. Johnston said the Baer-Pastor fight is scheduled for March 19, and Critchley said if Baer has any intention of making the London campaign he'll have to sail from New York March 3.

Cards, Terps In Cage Tilts Tonight

Catholic U. to Meet St. Thomas; Old Line to Play Wolfpack.

Catholic University and Maryland share the collegiate sports spotlight tonight, engaging topnotch opponents in basketball. The Cards meet St. Thomas, of Scranton, Pa., at Brookland at 8:30 o'clock, and Maryland entertains North Carolina State at 8 o'clock at College Park.

St. Thomas will have law and order on its side, at least, in the person of big Ed Coleman, a regular forward who also serves as a deputy sheriff in Lackawanna County. Coleman is one of the Tommies' most feared sharpshooters and a good all-around floorman.

On its side the Cards will have Hermie Schmarr, just as big and reputedly as good as Coleman, although he didn't do so well in the first game between the teams. St. Thomas nosed out Catholic at Scranton, 39-37, and Schmarr was held scoreless from the field for the first time this season.

Maryland will be the underdog against North Carolina State, one of the best teams in the conference and a heavy favorite to win the annual tournament. Coach Burt Shipleys' men gave the Southerners a real argument before dropping the first game between them, but it is doubtful if they'll come as close tonight. The first game score was 41-39.

Labor Shortage Held Probable In Three Years

Forecast Is Based Upon Maintenance of Rate of Recovery.

New York, Feb. 23.—Continued increase in business activity at the same rate as between 1933 and 1936 will make a general labor shortage highly probable by 1940, and compel drastic reconsideration of policies affecting working hours, employment and improvement of productive efficiency in industry, if the American standard of living is to be maintained.

This conclusion is the result of a comprehensive study of unemployment and business recovery made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board.

The conference board's study further emphasizes that there are no grounds for the assumption that the United States is destined to carry a permanent body of unemployed at public expense, if business recovery continues in the next four years at the same rate as in the past, or even at the normal rate.

The average number of employed workers in 1936, according to the conference board's estimates, was 42,920,000. Continued increase in the total volume of production and trade and of output per man-hour at the same rate as since 1933, with the currently prevailing hours of work, would require the following number of workers in the years immediately ahead:

1937	45,519,000
1938	48,335,000
1939	51,418,000
1940	54,802,000

1940 Estimate.

Taking into consideration the net annual increase in the labor force due to the addition of new workers with increase in the population, the conference board estimates that the total number of available workers in 1937 will approximate 53,200,000; in 1938, 53,900,000; in 1939, 54,500,000; and in 1940, 55,200,000. Subtracting from these figures the estimated total employment in each year, the board estimates that under the assumed conditions the total number of unemployed, or the total available labor surplus, would average approximately 7,700,000 in 1937, 5,600,000 in 1938, 3,100,000 in 1939, and a little less than 400,000 in 1940.

The conference board points out that these estimates make no allowance for any temporary unemployment due to seasonal operation, sickness or short-period shifts from one job to another. The best available estimate of the number of workers who normally are not and cannot be employed for these reasons is continually around 2,000,000. If this number is subtracted from the figures given above, it appears that the total actually available labor surplus would not exceed 3,600,000 in 1938 and 1,100,000 in 1939. In 1940 there would be a deficit or shortage of 1,600,000 active workers.

Domestic Copper Raised to 15 Cents

New York, Feb. 23 (AP).—Phelps Dodge Corporation, a leading producer, announced late today it had raised its price for domestic copper to 15 cents a pound. The change marked first acceptance by a producer of the 15-cent level established at the end of last week by customs smelters. The previous price was 14 cents.

Anaconda Copper Mining Co. announced it had also lifted quotations to the 15-cent level and other producers thereafter swung quickly into line.

Break in London.

London, Feb. 23 (AP).—The price of copper broke the equivalent of 1 cent a pound in the metal exchange today following yesterday's jump of more than 2 cents to the equivalent of 17 cents a pound. About 5,000 tons changed hands at today's figure which was equivalent to 16 cents a pound.

Tin continued its advance, closing at the equivalent of 61 cents a pound compared with 60.8 cents yesterday. A total of 500 tons was sold.

Wheat Declines With Halt in Foreign Buying

Drop in May Delivery Exceeds Two Cents a Bushel.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Failure of wheat demand to improve as a result of last week's price break led to a fresh drop of more than 2 cents a bushel in May wheat today. July and September wheat, representing grain available from the 1937 crop, declined more than a cent. Foreign interest in wheat from exporting countries was extremely limited.

Wheat closed 1⅛@2¼ cents below Saturday's finish, or about at the low for the day; May, 1.30½@1.30⅝; July, 1.14¼@1.14⅜; September, 1.11⅛@1.11¼; corn was ¾ up to 1⅝ off; May, 1.05⅜@1.05½; July, 1.01; September, 94⅜@94¾; oats, ¼@2⅛ off; May, 46⅛, and rye, ⅞@2⅜ down; May, 1.08¾. Provisions were 5 cents higher to 5 lower.

Stocks Decline in Active Trading as Steel and Motor Shares Yield to Strike Threats.

New York, Feb. 23.—Weakness in most sections of the stock market, and in the speculative bond positions, appeared to be largely a case of inability to stand prosperity. The excitement of the rise in metals and other commodities was watered down over the holiday, and it emphasized the tendency of traders to take profits and bearings. After a poor opening the market held steady during the middle periods, but closed with a fresh decline to the lowest prices of the day. Leading issues showed losses of 2 to 4 points on a turnover of around 2,850,000 shares. May wheat ended 2 cents lower at 130⅝ cents a bushel.

Although nothing in the news over the holiday could be cornered for use as an excuse for selling stocks, the early market reflected a certain anxiety among traders, based on a number of causes. One was the growing intensity of the speculation in metals and the shares of steel and mining companies.

Excesses usually bring unpleasant reactions and, however much justification there may be for higher prices as a result of rearmament demand for steel, copper and other metals, the sharp rise in prices may bring, as hinted in London, official intervention. Another cause for worry was the boring in of the laborites. Early trouble is promised, not only for the automobile industry, which won at the best a Pyrrhic victory in the General Motors plants, but for the coal and steel industries as well.

Gold Price.

In addition to those disturbing influences, so much talk is heard about the possibility of speculation curbs in the way of a lower gold price, i. e., an upward revision in the value of the dollar, as permitted the President by law, and of some action, possibly the gold value revision or penalty taxation on foreign investment, or both, that the public can be excused for believing some of it. Even the President has hinted, although it is difficult to say whether he wishes to be taken seriously, that perhaps the "hot money" problem is not so hot after all. At least, he is on the right track.

Of the seven billions of funds which the Government estimates has come this way in recent years, some experts calculate at least a third must be considered repatriated American funds. A large portion of the remiander is held to be foreign money permanently invested here, money which would be unlikely to go back home, especially in view of unsettled foreign political conditions. That which remains and which legitimately can be regarded as mobile money, if any, easily could be handled in case of withdrawal by the facilities of the Federal Reserve, in view of our large gold supply and our flexibility of credit resources. Its place in the speculative and investment markets quickly would be taken by American money.

Higher Tax.

It may be nevertheless that the Administration will wish to use the foreign money affair as an excuse for larger tax revenues, since it must be on the lookout for more money wherever it can find it. As the case now stands, foreign traders have the advantage over Americans, who have to pay high capital gains surtaxes. A higher tax on foreign incomes derived from American investments scarcely would drive out much foreign capital, but it might bring such complications as retaliatory taxation. In Canada, for example, we have much more money employed than Canadians have in this country. A flat tax on capital gains to apply to all probably would be the best answer to the question.

As for a reduction in the dollar price of gold, now set by the President at $35 an ounce, that is a possibility which seems to be several light-years away from probability. We have gone so far with the devalued dollar that it might well be worse all round to retrace any of our steps taken since the old $20-an-ounce standard was abandoned.

Coppers.

The speculative jump of 2 cents a pound for copper in London yesterday brought its natural reaction today when the price dropped a cent, but continued at a level to suggest a higher American price, unless buyers get the wind up on the various official hints thrown out on the possibility of a squeeze. Copper shares as a consequence were held in check a bit, although a few in the low-priced section went ahead and the group was the best on the board. Beyond question, plenty of copper can be turned out to supply all the big navy and army demands, and the industrial requirements as well, at a lower price than that now prevailing. Equilibrium may come later, but until the mines quicken their pace a good deal, the speculator will have a good chance to make something. When governments are spending billions, or are preparing so to do, profits are bound to seep through to the individual. War profits without the war are at least highly preferable to war without the profits.

Tip?

"With the Social Security Board, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and other Government agencies investing in Government bonds, and in view of the Secretary [of the Treasury]'s statement with reference to future financing, I leave it to you to determine approximately what amount of Government bonds will be available to the public."—J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency in Washington speech last Saturday night.

Low Priced Metals.

1,300% Gain Listed By Marshall Field

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Marshall Field & Co., of Chicago, reported today a gain of more than 1,300 per cent in earnings in 1936, and voted to clear up accumulated dividends on the prior-preferred stock. The report, issued by James O. McKinsey, chairman, showed consolidated net earnings of $2,878,745, or 67 cents a common share, for 1936, compared to $199,176, or a deficit of $1.25 a common share, in 1935. The 1936 earnings were the largest since 1930, when the return was $4,726,728, or $1.82 a common share.

Reich Offers Loan of Half Billion Marks

"For Continuation of the Government's Various Tasks."

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 23.—The German government announced today floating of a 500,000,000 mark loan (approximately $201,000,000) in treasury bills at 4½ per cent interest. The loan will run for an average of nine years and will be redeemed in sections of one-tenth on each March 1 from 1944 to 1949.

One hundred million marks will be offered for public subscription at the issue price of 98¾ on March 4.

Announcement of the loan was preceded by an editorial in the newspaper Der Angriff, published by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbel, captioned "There Is no Lack of Cash."

According to Der Angriff, the capital market is so glutted with cash that it "fairly cries out for quickest possible subscription to the new Reich loan."

The newspaper contended that even the new subscription will not exhaust the accumulated capital.

"Enough will be left for also financing the urgent tasks arising from the four years (economic self-sufficient) plan, the necessity of constructing workers' homes and issuing new industrial debentures, shares, mortgages and bonds," Der Angriff declared.

Dr. Stone to Address Bankers' Association

The auditors' section of the District of Columbia Bankers Association will hold a dinner meeting at Westley Hall on Friday night. Dr. Edward Stone will be the guest speaker for the evening, and his topic will be "World Peace and Our Economic System."

Mr. Stone is a member of the faculty of the local American Investment Bankers School and is also on the faculty of the graduate school of banking at Rutgers University. He is at present chief of the project analysis division of the Resettlement Administration.

Employment Shows Steady Upward Trend

Gains 5.9% in Year and Is Now 6.7% Under 1929 Level.

New York, Feb. 23.—The total number of unemployed workers in December, 1936, was 8,399,000, according to estimates of the National Industrial Conference Board. This is a decrease of 477,000, or 5.4 per cent from the estimate for November, 1936, and a decrease of 1,844,000, or 18.0 per cent from December, 1935.

Employment in all types of enterprise in the United States in December, 1936, was 44,475,000 workers. This was an increase of 528,000 workers, or 1.2 per cent over November, and an increase of 2,450,000, or 5.9 per cent over December, 1935.

The number of workers employed in December, 1936, was 2,681,000, or 6.7 per cent below the average of 47,156,000 workers employed in 1929.

From November to December, 1936, the increases in employment, by industrial groups, were: trade, distribution and finance, 378,000; manufacturing, 116,000; service, 62,000; mining, 11,000. Decreases in employment were found in: agriculture, 31,000; transportation, 10,000; construction, 7,000; public utilities, 3,000, and forestry and fishing, 1,000.

Compared with December, 1935, employment in December, 1936, increased 9.6 per cent in manufacturing; 9.3 per cent in construction; 9.02 per cent in transportation; 5.7 per cent in the public utilities; 5.6 per cent in trade, distribution and finance; 3.8 per cent in the service industries, and 3.8 per cent in agriculture.

STAGES OF RECOVERY

Employment and earnings in many industries are above their 1929 peaks. Others do not yet show marked recovery. Several basic industries lag even below their lowest 1921 depression levels. The current relative position of an industry is a vital investment consideration.

The "F.&B. Industries Service" has been developed for the convenience of investors in comparing and analyzing various specific industries. It is available to Fenner & Beane customers and other accredited individuals through this office.

'Stork Derby' Ruled Legal, but Children Must Be Legitimate

Toronto, Feb. 23 (AP).—All but one of Toronto's "stork derby" mothers rejoiced tonight over a court decision validating eccentric Charles Vance Millar's $500,000 bequest to the city's most prolific mother.

The sole exception was Mrs. Pauline Mae Clarke, whose claims to victory received a possible setback when the Ontario Court of Appeals, upholding the prize, also declared illegitimate children would not be counted in the contest that ended October 31, 1936, ten years after Millar's death.

Though five of Mrs. Clarke's nine offspring were born after she was separated from her husband, it was pointed out the five children were not necessarily illegitimate.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, February 17, 1937. A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia on December 14, 1936, in the matter of closing certain streets, and in connection therewith the dedication of new streets, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are in the public interests and not detrimental to the interests of abutting property owners, notice is hereby given that the said Commissioners have prepared the following order: "Ordered: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, Macomb street between Little Falls road and Mauo street northwest, and Weaver terrace between Lowell street and Little Falls road northwest, are hereby ordered closed, same to take effect on and after March 15, 1937, such action being taken. However, in connection with the dedication of land for new street area, all as shown on map numbered 2003 in the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, the title to the land comprised in said area so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said map." Any and all parties interested must file objections to said closings in writing before the effective date of above order; otherwise said order shall become effective on March 15, 1937, as aforesaid, and said street area shall on and after said date become closed in accordance with the provisions of said act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, GEORGE E. ALLEN, DAN I. SULTAN, Commissioners, D. C.

BENNY — No Rescue Needed — By J. Carver Pusey

AW, THEY WON'T LET ME IN THE ROOM WITH SLIM NO MORE.
BUT WHY NOT? HE'S LOTS BETTER. THE DOCTOR SAID HE COULD GO HOME TOMORROW. WHY CAN'T YOU GO IN?
AW, THEY SAID I BOTHER SLIM.
I MADE A LITTLE NOISE LAST TIME, WHEN I FELL OVER A CHAIR, SO THEY PUT ME OUT.
GEE, THAT'S TOUGH. BUT I'LL GO TELL GRANMA YOU'RE SORRY.
HEY, COME BACK HERE, AND MIND YER OWN BUSINESS. YER GRANMA KNOWS BEST. IF I WENT IN THERE, I'D SURE DO SUMPIN TO UPSET SLIM. I'M GONNA STAY RIGHT HERE.

Kleinert's IMPROVED Snugfit Latex Panties

WITH THE SHIRRED WAISTBAND

25c

Nature made Baby with a lovely round tummy and no waistline! That's where Kleinert stepped into the picture! They knew no baby could be socially acceptable with panties hanging down around the ankles. They took marvelous latex, the wonder rubber that can stand practically any strain, and made it into panties with a shirred waistband that stays put! Now anybody's baby can be high, dry and handsome—for a mere 25c! And what's more, Kleinert's Latex panties are so tough that they can be dropped into boiling water for sterilization without coming to grief! Put your baby into Kleinert's Latex—and he'll promptly join the best dressed babies club.

Fascinating facts about a very dry subject

25c is the very low price of these miraculous panties—and they have a formfit crotch and snug short legs for extra comfort.
